Prisoner Exhausted
The officers who answered Olhausen's call said that they found him near exhaustion from ill treatment and gagging. A few hours later acting on Olhausen's information they arrested the four. Corbett, the police reported was heavily armed and halted his car only when the police machine forced it into the curb.

After Olhausen identified the four at police headquarters he said that he had been taken first to Corbett's house and that Corbett later stuck an automatic pistol against his forehead and made him write a note to his wife telling her where to go to get the money with which to ransom him. He said that he had written his wife to go to one bank where he had $4,500 on deposit, and to another where he had $4,000.

Demand Meetings
Because he told the asserted kidnapers that was all the money he had, they ordered him to write his wife instructions to take out the deeds to his property and borrow enough money to make up the $10,000.

COURTING DEATH; WANTING TO LIVE

"The Legion of the Condemned" Shows for Two More Days at Elsinore

Deep in the throes of disillusionment—a distaste for life—these men of "The Legion of the Condemned" laughed at death and even fought for it. Eagerly they gambled for the "Mission Special" because it usually meant death for the one.

These men, who came from all walks of life, were always flying and fighting—they were the terror of the Western Front and they courted danger.

In the midst of session at the Lane Rabbit a new member arrives—a new member for the calendar of the clouds. Gale Price, a reporter, once glorified in life, wanted to live—had a sweetheart—and tasted of the ecstasy of love.

Then out of a clear sky came that which shattered his love and life was useless to him. He became the most daring—the most fearless and likewise the most feared. Death offered a solution to him and he craved it.

He won a "mission special" then he wanted to live—he craved life. His problem was to free himself from the mess of death. With his sweetheart he was sentenced to be shot by the enemy—the firing squad was ready and then...

POLICE FRUSTRATE KIDNAPING PROJECT

Four Held By Los Angeles Authorities Following Ransom Plot

LOS ANGELES, Apr. 12.—(AP)—Two women and two men were arrested by police in the San Fernando valley near here today when they returned to the deserted warehouse where George Olhausen said he had been held a prisoner for ransom since Tuesday night when he was taken from his home at the point of a gun and from before the eyes of his wife.

The prisoners gave their names as Robert Corbett, Mrs. Mabel Corbett, E. C. Morris and Miss Peggy Larkin. They were charged with kidnaping and holding Olhausen for $110,000 ransom. Police expect to arrest two more men in connection with the asserted plot.

Olhausen said he had been tied and gagged with adhesive tape and cotton and left in the deserted warehouse. Late last night he escaped and made his way several miles to a creamery where he telephoned to the police.

The officers who answered Olhausen's call said that they found him near exhaustion from ill treatment and gagging. A few hours later acting on Olhausen's information they arrested the four. Corbett, the police reported was heavily armed and halted his car only when the police machine forced it into the curb.

After Olhausen identified the four at police headquarters he said that he had been taken first to Corbett's house and that Corbett later stuck an automatic pistol against his forehead and made him write a note to his wife telling her where to go to get the money with which to ransom him. He said that he had written his wife to go to one bank where he had $4,500 on deposit, and to another where he had $4,000.

Demand Meetings
Because he told the asserted kidnapers that was all the money he had, they ordered him to write his wife instructions to take out the deeds to his property and borrow enough money to make up the $10,000.

Olhausen said that after writing the note, he was then taken to the deserted warehouse, bound, gagged and left alone. He eventually worked himself loose and escaped. The taxicab driver, J. F. Smith, who delivered the ransom note to Mrs. Olhausen, told police that he had been called to the Corbett address and that a young woman, later identified as Peggy Larkin, told him to take the note to Mrs. Olhausen. Smith told the officers that the Larkin woman seemed anxious to get his name and cab number.

Clues Picked Up
When the Larkin woman was apprehended, detectives declared that they found Smith's name and cab number in the woman's handbag. The police theory that Olhausen was tangled in a bootlegger's and hijacker's underworld was gained credence yesterday when detectives found Olhausen's expensive automobile in a garage said to have been rented by him. The machine contained a quantity of high grade liquors, police said.

ENGINEERS' BOARD APPROVAL WANTED

Activities Being Continued for Deep Channel in Columbia River

PORTLAND, Apr. 12.—(AP)—A Washington, D. C. despatch to the Oregonian says the board of army engineers there was asked today to concur in the favorable recommendation of the division engineer on the improvement of Skipanon channel by G. Clifford Barlow of Warrenton. Barlow explained that a greater depth than the 20 feet now available is needed if partially loaded vessels coming down the Columbia river are to take on lumber cargo at the Warrenton mills.

The despatch continues: "The projects under consideration, upon both of which the board had voted unfavorably prior to today's hearing, provide respectively for a 30 foot channel 200 feet in width at a cost of $135,000 and a 25 foot channel 150 feet wide to cost $78,000.

Barlow said that at least one large pulp mill will probably locate at Warrenton, which lies at the head of the Skipanon channel and within a few miles of Astoria, if a depth is provided which will enable large vessels to dock there. There are also three large lumber mills which will contribute large tonnage," he stated.

Senator Steiwer, who supported Barlow's request, pointed out that industrial development in the vicinity of Astoria must take place largely at Warrenton, because of the character of the neighboring topography. He predicted that with an adequate channel, Warrenton will become the leading "topping off" port of the lower Columbia, with large vessels collecting their cargoes there.

The question for debate is "Resolved, that the United States should cease to protect by armed force capital invested in foreign countries except after a formal declaration of war."

The public is invited to attend, no admission being charged. This will be the last debate by the women debaters this season. The Willamette freshmen team will meet the University of Oregon Frosh and the Oregon State Rook debate teams sometime in the near future, the date to be known later.

Mexican Trains Collide

Crash Kills Four Persons

MEXICO CITY, Apr. 12.—(AP)—Four were killed, another is dying and two others were gravely injured in a head on collision between a northbound Mexico City-Laredo passenger train, and a southbound freight at Nopala, state of Hidalgo, this noon.

Those killed and gravely injured are all members of the train crew; the passenger list which included as always a large number of Americans returning from Mexico to the border, showed only a few minor injuries and no deaths.

Engineers and firemen of both locomotives were killed outright. Whether the passenger engineer misunderstood his orders to stop on the siding of Nopala, or the switch there failed to work will probably never be known. In any event, the passenger train failed to take the siding and ran into the freight at a high speed a short way further down the track.

Thrifty Insane Patient Escapes; Officers Seek

Mr. Blumh was committed to the institution from Portland in 1914, and had acted as librarian and postmaster at the institution for several years. Officials said he had saved approximately $1,000 which he invested in liberty bonds.
