BREMEN MESSAGES CARRIED OVERLAND

Remoteness of Greenly Island Emphasized As Details Come Through

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 13. (AP)—Messages exchanged between the Canadian government and radio station at Louisburg, N. S., and the Marconi station at Point Amour, Labrador, picked up tonight by station 1-HA of Manchester, emphasized the remoteness of Greenly Island on which the Junkers monoplane Bremen descended after her transatlantic flight.

The news that the fliers were safe was hours late in reaching the outside world because messengers had to traverse the twenty miles intervening between the island and the radio station either afoot or by dog team.

The plane, the messages said, landed at noon. The first message sent out by the Marconi operator was received at St. John, N. F., at 6:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time. Replying to a request by Louisburg to explain the delay the Marconi station tonight sent out the following:

"Don't know particulars now. Only dog teams possible. About 20 miles to relay news. Have sent messages by foot."

A second message from the Point Amour station added that the delay was partly due to the fact that the landing was on an island, indicating that there was some difficulty in reaching the mainland at this season.

The Louisburg station asked whether there were any transportation facilities to Greenly Island. No answer to this was recorded.

STATUS CONDEMNED MEN NOT CHANGED

The status of Ellsworth Kelley and James Willos, who were scheduled to be hanged today but who were reprieved for a week by Governor Patterson Thursday night, remained unchanged tonight.

Late this afternoon the governor returned from southern Oregon and said he would have no further statement today.

To make its position in the case thoroughly clear the state supreme court issued a statement emphasizing that any recommendation to the governor would not be from the justices sitting as a court.

According to a telegram by Bradley Ewers, attorney for the convicts, to Governor Patterson, and later confirmed by Chief Justice Rand, a number of the justices will recommend commutation to life imprisonment if asked by the governor for a recommendation.

Indications are that only Justices Bean and Brown may not make individual recommendations. It became known today that incidental to an argument before Judge Percy R. Kelly yesterday on Mrs. L. V. Goode's petition for the appointment of a sanitary commission to examine Willos a sharp encounter took place between Judge Kelly and Judge L. H. McMahan. The latter it is said approached Kelly for a quiet discussion of some points in the case.

This Kelly is said to have resented and asked Sheriff Bower to see that proper decorum was observed in the court room. At the sheriff's suggestion McMahan retired.

Among prominent persons who recommended commutation of the sentences in telegrams to the governor at Marshfield yesterday were Judge McMahan and Federal Judge John H. McNary.

All Hail the Power of Jesus Name

Rev. Edward Perronet, 1726-1792 "All hail the power of Jesus' name, Let angels prostrate fall; Bring forth the royal diadem, And crown Him Lord of all."

Edward Perronet, a brilliant and witty English Methodist pastor, is frequently referred to as "a bird with one song." His own great song is "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," which has come down through the years as one of the finest of Christian hymns, a soul inspiring poem, sung to a worthy tune. Perronet's name has been closely linked with the Wesley's of England, with whom he labored for some years. Although he broke with John Wesley, after some time, on a doctrinal question, he continued in his work for the church and spent his last days at Canterbury, where he died.

His famous hymn is sung to three tunes, the first being called "Miles' Lane," the work of one William Shrubsole. On his death, Perronet left all his worldly possessions to the composer, whose affection he had always esteemed in life. "Diadem" is another tune to which the hymn is sometimes sung, but of the three "Coronation," by Oliver Holden, is the best known and the hymn itself has been given the same name.

Holden was brought up as a carpenter, but his tastes early turned to music and he spent many an hour at a little pipe organ. This organ, on which he first struck off the notes of "Coronation" is now preserved in a room in the old Boston State house. Although Perronet and John Wesley broke on a doctrinal question, the affair was not a personal quarrel and they always maintained their mutual admiration and affection. Wesley, however, would not admit any of the hymns written by Perronet to his collection.

Charles Wesley was very close to the poet and frequently referred to him as "Ned." A quotation from his diary illustrates the treatment accorded the Methodist preachers in the early days of the church: "From Rochdale, went to Bolton, and soon found that the Rochdale lions were lambs in comparison with these at Bolton. Edward Perronet was thrown down and rolled in the mud and mire. Stones were hurled and windows broken." It was under such circumstances that the men worked together for eight years.

Rev. E. P. Scott, while working as a missionary in India, learned of a fierce tribe in the back country, which had never heard of the Gospel. In the face of his friends' entreaties, he determined to go to these people and preach to them. He packed his valise and violin, with which he was wont to conduct his services and departed.

After two days of hard traveling, he found himself in the mountains, surrounded by a band of savages, with a hundred spears leveled at his heart. Without knowing what to do, he drew forth his violin, closed his eyes and began to play and sing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

He sang the first verse and nothing happened, but he dared not open his eyes. Then came the second verse. At the end of the third stanza, he opened his eyes to see what the savages were going to do. All the spears had been dropped and tears were rolling from the eyes of the heathen men. Scott was invited to their homes, where he spent over two years, laboring in behalf of his faith and his Christ.

This hymn, the only one of Perronet's which is still used, is as much a favorite in this country as in England. It is ranked as "No. 21" on a list compiled by Dr. Benson. The hymn has an irresistible power and is a favorite with large congregations.

Records in the case showed that the corporation in 1908 filed notice of intention to appropriate waters of the creek, and constructed a plant on the bank of the creek near the point of diversion. The plant was operated until 1919.

In that year the company moved its plant and diverted the water to the extent that the stream was no longer of use for fish culture. Prior to this expansion the state had withdrawn all the waters of Herman creek from appropriation except for fish culture. The principal questions that arose in the litigation was whether the company, in making the change of locations, had abandoned its original intention and whether the amount of water to which it was entitled was that used in the original plant or the amount claimed for use in the present plant.

The court held in favor of the company.

Wilson of the circuit court for Hood River county. The suit was filed by the state, on application to the fish commission, against the Peoples' West Coast Hydroelectric corporation.
