SEGREGATED WORK IN ENGLISH PAYS

Annual Report of Departmental Head at Senior High Given

Ten teachers taught 41 classes, 26 in composition and 16 in literature, the first semester of the 1927-28 school year, shows the annual report of Ada C. Ross, head of the English department at the senior high school. Classes were reduced to 39 the last semester, with 15 composition and 24 literature. Pupils enrolled totaled 1048.

English 3 pupils were segregated into groups based upon ability tests given early in the year and in those groups failures were reduced 50 per cent, showing the advisability of the segregation method.

In the second semester, selective enrollment was carried still further, with inauguration of the Superior English group of 22 seniors whose English work had been outstanding and selection of the best students for a public speaking class. Both these segregated groups did very satisfactory work and will be carried on next year, the report states.

Other work of the department included adoption of new texts and revision of the course of study to correspond with them; also a grammar review for the last year students based upon college entrance requirements.

The teachers of the department were prominent in extra curricular activities and many of them indicated interest in professional growth, the report outlines.

Miss Ross submitted a number of recommendations for next year, including:

One of four elective courses for seniors of eighth term standing; a remedial English for those who fail in a departmental test; public speaking; dramatics, including a survey of drama technique; and an essay and short story course with a study of current prose and poetry.

Regular department meetings with a suitable program.

Definite recognition and organization of the public speaking course.

Approval of selection of plays and coaches for same by committee consisting of principal or his appointee, dean of girls and a member of the English department appointed by the departmental head.

De FRANCE SWISS ORGANDIE

These Fabrics on Sale

For One Week Beginning

TODAY!

(Main Floor)

Hundreds of yards of these well known sheer fabrics, in the latest "floral" prints, have been carefully selected for this big event. More than 25 different patterns and color combinations are included, many of the pieces are worked out in 3-color and even 4-color effects, and they are beautiful beyond our words to express.

—And such patterns and colorings, the new "roseleaf" . . . a French blue called "ciel" . . . a peach shade that has the suggestion of tangerine and called "syria." The "spring green" and "orchid" are most alluring.

These models will be on display in our Wash Goods Department. This will make it easy to select the pattern and color most suited to the type of garment planned.

Both miss and matron will find just the pattern and color scheme to gladden her heart in this very large collection. We feel fortunate to have this special offering so early in the season, and our customers will be thoroughly delighted if an early visit is made to this department . . . while the pattern and color assortment is unbroken.
