CHAUTAQUA WILL OPEN HERE JULY 5

Unusual Scenic, Lighting and Staging Features Will Be Used

July 5th will be the opening date of the Salem Chautauqua this year, the local committee has announced. Every attempt has been made by the management to present an up-to-date program and the findings of the scientific, economic and theatrical worlds have been combined in the 1928 program.

Unusual scenic, lighting and staging features will be used this year which will add much to the value and interest of the programs.

Two of the most elaborate sets of scenery ever carried by Chautauqua companies are to be used this season. "A Night in Hawaii," with George W. Vierra's Hawaiians includes a stage setting without equal on the Chautauqua platform.

An erupting volcano, an exotic South Sea moon, palms, thatched houses and a romantic sea will be some of the features. Mr. Vierra, who heads the company, is considered to have done more to popularize Hawaiian music in the United States than any other man.

The Vierras have not only played the leading Chautauqua circuits of the East but also the vaudeville circuits in that section of the country.

A medieval cathedral is to be represented and provide the atmosphere for the Cathedral Choir which is the third day attraction. The choir will be headed by H. W. D. Tooley, well-known director of choral organizations for Chautauqua.

There will be two plays this year. "The Patsy," the second night feature, is Barry Conner's—the author of "Applesauce"—newest play. It is written in typical Barry Conner style with plenty of wise-cracks, clever situations, witty repartee and clean fun. "A message from Mars" is the big last night comedy-drama written by the English playwright, Richard Gaijthony. An unusual theme, brilliant comedy, and unique lighting effects mark it as one of the great plays. It has been played in London as well as all the larger cities of the United States.

Two celebrities have been selected to open the Chautauqua. Lon Johnson, popular radio artist and composer, together with Jessie Rae Taylor, characterist and impersonator, whose name appears in the Bookman Celebrity List of 1927, have been combined in one big program. Granville Jones, a mountaineer lecturer after the style of Abraham Lincoln, has a real treat for Chautauqua-goers in the form of his lecture, "The Philosophy of a Hill-Billy." The much-needed-to-be-discussed subject "Crime and Criminals," will be considered by Frank Travers, criminologist.

Mrs. Josephine Dominick, who has lectured in all the principal cities of the United States on "Better Dress" and "Better Homes," will be a second afternoon attraction.

The Cordova Concerters, including Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Clark, will be one of the features of Chautauqua which music lovers will appreciate. Mr. and Mrs. Clark have only recently returned from Spain and brought with them many delightful songs, instruments and costumes.
