No man seweth a piece of new cloth on an old garment: else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse. And no man putteth new wine in old bottles: else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles. Mark 2:21-22.

HERBERT HOOVER The next president of the United States received a considerable portion of his background as a lowly laborer and student in his formative boyhood years in Salem.

His habits of work and study formed in Salem took him through Stanford university. They remained with him when, as a young mining engineer, he mucked it with common laborers in a California mine.

They were with him when he performed the great task as a food administrator for 10,000,000 Belgians and French for five years, at a net overhead cost of less than half of one per cent; as supervisor of the immediate post war rehabilitation of central Europe when he was called upon to take personal charge of all the railroads, mines and telegraph systems in the Balkans and in the old Austrian empire.

They have been with him as secretary of commerce, during which time he has raised that department to one of the most useful of all the federal departments; from an inferior place in our scheme of governmental business.

Herbert Hoover has had peculiar training to fit him for the high office to which he is being called. He is perhaps the best qualified man in the nation to take over the responsibilities of the place that destiny has marked out for him.

At this time in the progress of the United States, in which idealism joined with constructive ability are more needed than ever before in the ordering of many new problems, this country is particularly fortunate that it will be able to draft for the highest place in the nation a man with the genius, vision, ability and general large caliber of Herbert Hoover.

THE FARM RELIEF PLANKS The farm relief plank of the Republican platform adopted at Kansas City yesterday makes a lot of fine declarations. The Republican party has done a great deal for the farmers of the United States, enumerated in that plank.

But the statement on the real issue, involving the main principle of the McNary-Haugen idea, is a straddle. The straddle is accomplished in the following paragraph: "The Republican party pledges itself to the enactment of legislation creating a federal farm board clothed with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of farm marketing systems of farmer owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent or control surpluses through orderly distribution."

That may mean something or nothing. It can be made to mean what it promises only through the adoption of the McNary-Haugen idea, and that idea can be made effective only with the equalization principle.

To prevent or control surpluses through orderly distribution will not be accomplished with a wave of the hand. It will not be done by a set of rules. It will not be made certain by "orderly distribution" that does not provide some form of 100 per cent control; 100 per cent compulsory cooperation.

Senator Borah was wrong in his speech. The McNary-Haugen idea is not unconstitutional. And it is workable. But whether its working would be a good thing for the country or for the farmers themselves; that is, in the long run.

That is another question. But this straddle does not kill the McNary-Haugen idea. It will not die. It may never be brought into the form of law and it might not be a good thing to have it made into a law. But there are millions of farmers in the country who will keep on demanding that it be spread upon the federal statute books.

This fight may be kept up for years. If it goes on for about fifteen years, it will fade out by mere lapse of time, for in that period the population of the United States will have caught up with agricultural production. We will then have no exportable surplus of a major agricultural product. We will need for home consumption all the agricultural products of our soil. We will become an importer of the things produced by the industries on the land of which we now have exportable surpluses.

Dr. C. W. Larson, managing director of the National Dairy Council, says that an additional 2,000,000 persons in the United States each year for the next 40 years could be supplied with as much milk as is now used per capita without adding to the number of cows in the dairy herds if each of America's 22,000,000 dairy cows would produce 100 pounds more milk each year. This might be doubled, by scientific breeding and feeding. In the herds of the Willamette valley, it could be easily doubled. The beet sugar industry would go far towards this result. But this country may get more than 80,000,000 increase of population by 1968. And a doubling of the per capita consumption of milk and its various products would be a good thing for the people.

LOCKWOOD APPEAL SET FOR JUNE 25

Arguments on Turner Woman's Case and Others Scheduled for June

The appeal of Mrs. Ruth Lockwood, Turner ranch owner, from a decree of the Marion county circuit court sentencing her to a term of two years in the state prison, has been set for argument before the supreme court for Monday, June 25.

Other cases which have been set for argument before the supreme court follow: N. Miller versus City of Woodburn, involving a suit to collect damages against the city for damage to property caused by sewage.

Labaree versus Siemens, involving an estate in Klamath county, set for argument June 26.

Reynolds versus Kansier, a mandamus proceeding in which an attempt is being made to compel Judge Kanzler of the Multnomah county circuit court to accept a jury verdict. This case is set for argument Wednesday, June 27.

Water rights on the John Day river and its tributaries are now under process of adjudication by the state engineer. The first remaining unadjudicated major water system in Oregon will be 955 persons claiming rights to water involved and including nearly one-fifth the entire area of the state.

As a preliminary step to the actual adjudication of these water rights claims are now being exhibited for inspection by interested parties. A representative of the engineering department was in Condon Thursday and will remain over Friday exhibiting these claims, which will be open for inspection in other towns in the John Day country as follows: Fos, June 16 and 18; Spray, June 19; Dayville, June 20; Prairie City, June 21 to 23; Canyon City, June 25 and 26.

Adjudication of water rights on three other Oregon streams is also under way by the state engineer's department. The taking of testimony on claims on Cow creek will be conducted at Glendale on July 12 and 13 and continued in the Salem office of the state engineer from July 23 to August 21.

Claims to water rights on Woolly river will be opened for inspection at Fort Klamath on July 16 and 17 and will be open for inspection in Salem from July 23 to August 21.

Bits For Breakfast Yes; we will Hooverize— But Hooverizing will mean a different thing than it did during the World war— It will mean constructive policies that will lead to larger individual prosperity and greater collective progress in the United States.

It will take $100,000 in capital investment for every 1000 acre increase in our flax industry, in the progress of making the state prison self supporting. So it will take $500,000 more. The investment now is about $500,000, and it has all been supplied, excepting $300,000, by the operation of the institution. Of this, the first $100,000 was a saving made in the cost of the institution. The next, $200,000, was provided by an appropriation of the last legislature.

But $125,000 of this is now in the treasury, with about $75,000 of convertible assets. This will all be needed to pay for the growing crop on the farms.

The next $500,000 ought to be provided in legislative appropriations. It will all be paid back in three years, by making the penitentiary self supporting. This can all be accomplished, in a term of years, by the earnings of the flax industry itself. But it would be better business to appropriate the funds and let the flax industry, and self support, come about as fast as practicable. That is, in three years. That is, 5000 acres next year, 6000 acres the following year, and 8000 acres the year after.

CURTIS FAVORS HOOVER

KANSAS CITY, June 14—(AP)—Hardly had the republican convention nominated Herbert Hoover for the presidency tonight before Senator Curtis of Kansas, declared that he was "for whoever would do his utmost for the party standard bearer in the forthcoming campaign."

Asked whether he was now a candidate for the vice presidential post on the ticket, the Kansas senator said "not even talk to my grandmother about that."

Questioned further, Curtis asserted forcibly that he would discuss the vice presidency with any one on earth.
