

THE BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS FOR 1928

think of Him as a living Spirit working within men to energize their spiritual lives. He did think of Christ as a resident presence, a power cooperating with the human will to transform man into the veritable likeness of the Divine.

of eternity are written in his soul. Browning catches the meaning when speaks of "The unlit lamps and the unglint loins." You understand what that means.

It is this very loss of self-attainment which grinds the heart. Hope does not wholly die, but when we daily go to battle with weapons which are futile, defeat after defeat brings nothing but despair.

St. Paul calls you to claim your heritage. He asks you to claim your heritage. He asks you to enter into fellowship with the Lord of Life: "He that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit."

by contact with others and the truth must be equally evident that men are changed by contact with Christ.

I think there is nothing more certainly demonstrated than that vast spiritual powers are called forth in men by causes which they cannot explain. There are depths in consciousness which no one can fathom, reaches in conscience which no human intelligence can define, passions and yearnings which no physical inheritance can interpret or satisfy.

"No person ever quite understands how his tongue utters its loftiest words, how his pen writes its noblest phrases, how his clear insights come to him, how his most heroic deeds get done, or how the finest strands of his character were woven."

But today He is infinitely more. Today we see him as the spiritual Power which grips and transforms the ages. What is the present meaning of that Man? We must leave Judea, pass beyond the years of His fleshly life, and mark what He meant to Augustine, Bernard Assisi, Luther and Wesley.
