CREAMERY TO ADD MILK-DRYING UNIT

Mt. Angel Association Plans To Use 25,000 Pound Whole Milk Daily

Mt. Angel, July 19.—(Special)—Farmers and dairymen round about Mt. Angel are grinning broadly these days, and well they may, for after several years of waiting, they are to see realized one of those things they have long wanted realized.

Mt. Angel is to have a milk drying unit; in fact, a 150 horsepower boiler is already on the ground, other machinery is coming and plans have been drawn up for a 40x26 foot frame structure which will be the milk drying unit of the Mt. Angel cooperative creamery.

Announcement of the addition of the milk drying unit has been made by Frank Hettwer, manager of the creamery. The unit will have a daily capacity of 25,000 pounds of whole milk and will cost approximately $20,000.

For the new project, the machinery capital stock has been increased from $10,000 to $25,000, which will allow for construction of the unit without plunging the association into debt.

The creamery will not establish a milk route here being little question that farmers will bring their milk to the creamery themselves. The farmer may now sell whole milk to the creamery, which will separate it, use the cream in its production of butter, and dry the separated milk.

Actual construction of the unit will not begin until R. J. Berning, president of the association, arrives home from a trip through the east. He has been giving careful attention to dryers while in the east. He is scheduled to be here any time.

ANIMAL AMBULANCES

BERLIN (AP)—Ambulances for animals are the latest addition to the city street scene. The local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals put two motor-cycles with side-cars into service to care for animals—cats and dogs chiefly—that meet with street accidents.

PRETENTIOUS BILL, ELSINORE SATURDAY

An entertainment treat is promised at the Elsinore theater Saturday with the presentation of a superlative five-act Association vaudeville bill that is heralded as reaching the "zenith of wholesome diversion." Every variety of entertainment is included in the pretentious program, which has two acts spitting headline honors. One of the bill toppers is Axel Christensen, the inventor and founder of the celebrated Christensen System of rag-jazz piano playing which is being taught universally from coast to coast. He has obtained a leave of absence from Station WHT, Chicago, to make the Association vaudeville tour. He has also been connected with stations WQJ, KYW and WTAS, Chicago. He has further enhanced his popularity with the music-loving world through the talking machine records and player piano rolls which he has made for the leading companies. A musical treat is in store for all who are fortunate enough to hear this accomplished artist.

Dividing headline position with Christensen is Jack Bigelow and his musical Misses, an aggregation of feminine pulchritude which will offer as artistic a bit of jazz music as was ever heard. The young women play saxophones, the clarinet, bass horn, banjo, drums, cornet, trombone, piano and French horn as well as men artists play them, and they present all the latest hits in syncopated style with sympathy effects. Each girl is talented and each is prepossessing.

Joe and Elsie Farrell will offer a refreshing specialty skit entitled "Getting Trimmed." The plot revolves around the fact that a male tonsorialist and a female barber have opened up barber shops next to each other. Beauty and not ability attracts the trade. With his business going on the rocks, the man talks over the situation with the lady. This is where the comedy comes in—and such comedy!

Arthur and Lucille Davids are a pair of really remarkable equilibrists possessing youth, personality and marvelous ability. They perform a series of new and startling tricks on the slack wire. Their offering is unusually interesting and thoroughly enjoyable.

The Cole brothers, two boys from the south, are clever hoofers and sweet singers. These boys can dance like a streak. They have good voices and personalities. They shine particularly, however, in the dance line, being exceptionally clever exponents of fast foot work.

MOVIES THAT TALK BRIEFLY EXPLAINED

But Two General Methods of New Production Now in Use for Films

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 19.—(AP)—How are talking movies made?

The question is being asked by many film fans, but even more eagerly is an answer sought by players, directors and producers.

For the players who have worked in sound-pictures are few; the directors who have made sound-pictures can be counted on the fingers of one hand, and the producers who actually have sound-pictures playing in theaters at the present moment are two—Fox and Warner Brothers.

Though trade names like Vitas-phone, Movietone, Photophone and Fimatone continue to multiply, all sound-pictures now on the market can be classified roughly in two groups:

1. Those in which the sound is recorded on disks similar to phonograph records.

2. Those in which the sound is recorded on film, which may be either the identical film that carries the picture or a secondary film geared to the same shaft.

In both disk and film methods, powerful amplifiers similar in principle to those used in modern radio sets plays a vital part. And in either system the "ear" which "hears" the actor while the camera lens "sees" him is a microphone, or set of microphones, similar to those used in radio broadcasting.

The microphone, of course, translates what it "hears" into electrical impulses, just as a telephone transmitter translates words into electrical impulses. In the Vitaphone and other disk systems these electrical impulses travel to a recording device similar to those used in making modern electrically recorded phonograph disks. The speed of the camera governs the speed at which the recording disk revolves, so that words and action are synchronized, and when the record is played in a theater at a speed governed by the speed of the film the words coming from a loudspeaker back of the screen seem to flow from the lips of the film image.

In the Movietone system, which involves recording sound on the edge of the film as it runs through the camera, the electrical impulses from the microphone travel to the camera and there govern the fluctuations of a helium light which is focused on the film. When the film is developed the sound record appears as a series of alternate light and dark lines of varied spacing and density on the left-hand margin of the film. This "sound-track" can be, and sometimes is, projected onto the screen along with the pictures, for it is a photographic record as distinct in its way as anything else in the picture. In ordinary theater showings, however, it is blocked out in projection.

As a Movietone film runs through the projection machine in a theater the sound-track on the edge of the film passes in front of a small light focused on a photo-electric cell. The alternate light and dark lines in the sound-track cause fluctuations in the light that actually reaches the cell, and these fluctuations in light reaching the cell cause electrical fluctuations corresponding to the original sound variations. These are amplified and conducted to the loud-speaker behind the screen, which reverses the process of the original microphone and translates them back into actual sound.

Since the words of an actor are photographed on the film at the same moment that his moving lips are being photographed, the synchronization, of course, is perfect. The foregoing description does not take into account many important technical differences in the various systems.

Suggests Using Convicts For Cancer Experiments

HAVANA, Cuba, July 19.—(AP)—Whether it's going to be formal, official execution for the condemned convicts of Cuba or death in the name of science, is being discussed in the newspapers as a consequence of a request made to the government by Dr. Matias Dugue, member of the national sanitization board and leading Cuban physician.

He asked to be allowed to experiment with cancer cure through the medium of condemned convicts who mbe would inoculate with the virus of that dread disease.

The issue is being roundly debated. Convicts condemned to death now are executed by the "garrote," which chokes them.

ANOTHER MONUMENT TO A GREAT COW

This One to a Holstein, With Highest Milk Record Up to Her Time

On July 31st the annual picnic of the Washington State Holstein-Friesian association will be held on the Carnation Milk Farm, near Tolt, Washington.

An elaborate program is prepared, including the unveiling of the monument to be erected to the memory of the world's record cow Segis Pietertje Prospect.

This cow was owned by the Carnation Milk company and hundreds of her descendants are scattered through the country. Her record of 37381.4 lbs. of milk is greater than any cow of any breed had ever produced. She also produced 1448.68 pounds of butter in one year. She was sired by King Segis 10th, one of the great sires of the breed.

World's Greatest Herd!

The herd of pure bred Holsteins on the Carnation Milk Farm is said to be the largest herd of pure bred dairy cattle in the world, numbering over 500 head.

The visitors on the farm that day will be shown through all of the barns and over the farm.

Thos. J. Owens, Seattle, is president of the Washington State Holstein-Friesian association and will be in charge of the program.

Girl Reserves Hike Six Miles Before Breakfast

(The following account of life at Camp Santaly was written for the Statesman by members at the camp.)

The fun at Camp Santaly, the YWCA camp near Lyons, is gaining tremendous momentum, working to the regular hours of work and play on the daily schedule every one's health is blooming. Tuesday at 4:30 o'clock in the morning a hike was taken to the spooky haunted house three miles away. Arriving home at 7:30 o'clock that morning, the girls were so hungry that the cook threatened to make porridge in the hot water tank. And by the way, Santaly has some cook.

Hiking along the river to the caves is a favorite sport. Thursday evening the treasure hunt will be held. Friday a Gypsy pattern will be built at a remote spot and a hunt for last year's held.

Sunday evening, a wienie roast on the flat rocks jutting into the river, to be followed by the Girl Reserve ceremonials around the fire, will round out the week's tramping. A more beautiful spot could not be found; for here the Indians built their fires before the coming of the white man.
