SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 19.—(AP.)—Physically, Gene Tunney is better equipped to defend his title against Tom Heeney on July 26 than he has been for any other bout in his career, according to Dr. Robert Shea of New York who has been caring for the champion's surgical needs for the past 10 years.

Dr. Shea gave the heavyweight ruler a thorough examination today and learned that he was in much better shape than before the second battle with Jack Dempsey, a year ago.

"Tunney's heart," Dr. Shea said, "has much greater reserve power than ever before. His hands and legs are perfect and I found that he had increased the development of his shoulder muscle since his last fight. This muscular increase should give Gene just so much more punching power."

The examination took place when Tunney returned from a six mile hike, during which he got in about a half hour of shadow-boxing from the gazing eyes of Speculator's curious summer folk. Even after these strenuous exercises, Dr. Shea said, the champion's nerve reflexes were normal and his neuro-muscular co-ordination the sharpest in his boxing career.

The surgeon, who is responsible for the toughening of the champion's once brittle hands, went over these members carefully and then pronounced them capable of pounding the champion's hopes out of the New Zealand blacksmith just a week hence.

When the road work and examination were over, Gene was given the rest of the day to spend as he saw fit. For a time this afternoon he interrupted the Speculator barber's sapphire practice by demanding a hair-trim.

Though the titular fight is a week away, Tunney plans to train but three more days, tomorrow, Sunday and probably end his campaign on Monday. He is hovering around 190 pounds, according to Lou Fink, his trainer, and this is the poundage he intends to carry against the challenger.

FINDS WAR PAPERS

Discovers 22 Copies of "Stars and Stripes"

Following publication of a story in Thursday morning's Statesman that a volume of "Stars and Stripes" which R. A. Harris of Salem donated to the Oregon state library was today worth $1,000, more copies of the "Stars and Stripes" have come to light.

Mrs. E. A. Oliver of route one has uncovered 22 copies of the publication and believes she has more. Altogether there were 71 issues printed of the weekly newspaper published in Paris during the World war for the soldiers and their home folk, so Mrs. Oliver's collection is about a third complete.

Mrs. Oliver received the publication while her son, Burt R. Oliver who is now living with her, was fighting in France. He was a member of the company which went through so many perils on rescue trips for the Lost Battalion. He was wounded over there and spent some time in a hospital and was just on his way back to the trenches when the armistice was proclaimed.

INTER-PLAYGROUND TRACK MEET LOOMS

Yesterday afternoon girls' volleyball teams from Yew Park played with teams at the 14th street grounds. The 14th street girls won two games 15-9 and 15-8, and lost the third game 0-15.

A tumbling exhibition put on by children of the two grounds is planned for the near future. This afternoon the 14th street girls will have a treasure hunt. Next week the special feature will be a parade of doll buggies, scooters and tricycles decorated by their owners. The buggy, scooter or tricycle best decorated will receive a prize.

Today the boys at 14th street will begin practice in track sports in anticipation of an inter-playground track meet to be held sometime within the next month. The events in this competition will include the 50, 100 and 220-yard dashes; standing and running broad jump; relay races, javelin throw and shotput. Date of this meet has not been arranged.

Yew park and 14th street baseball teams will mix again today at 2 o'clock, with the large boys at Yew Park and the small boys at 14th street.

GREEK THEATER HELD 20,000

CAL'S WIFE LEARNS TO PADDLE CANOE

Mrs. Coolidge Goes Boating on Brule River With Her Son John

SUPERIOR, Wis., July 19.—(AP.)—Rainy weather today kept President Coolidge indoors practically the whole time and prevented Mrs. Coolidge from taking a paddling lesson on the Brule river.

Mrs. Coolidge has lately taken to canoeing on the stream with her son, John. Mr. Coolidge's affection for the river apparently spurred her to find out for herself what its charms were and in the warm and long afternoons of the past days she chose the frail craft to explore the water surroundings of Cedar Island lodge.

Mrs. Coolidge was said to have expressed the desire to try today to learn how to manage a canoe herself. John Coolidge was to accompany her and although all arrangements had apparently been made, unfavorable weather obliged Mrs. Coolidge to return to her embroidery before the big log fire in the Lodge sitting room.

After a short excursion on the Brule early today, Mr. Coolidge was obliged to give up all thoughts of fishing by the rain. Some correspondence had been brought out to him in the morning that required attention and for the rest of the time he gave thought to the short speech which he will deliver on July 29 at Cannon Falls, Minn.

Mr. Coolidge's fear that a trip this year to Yellowstone Park is out of the question on account of the bad state of health of Mrs. Le-mira Goodhue, Mrs. Coolidge's mother, which might necessitate an immediate departure for Northampton, Mass., was brought to the

LAST COURTHOUSE USED BY LINCOLN

METAMORA Ill., July 19.—(AP.)—Scintillating in the middle of a business block, facing a shady square in a peaceful village, stands the "house of giants," old Woodford county courthouse, known as the last existing hall of justice where Abraham Lincoln practiced law.

It is the only courthouse of pioneer days remaining in the old eighth judicial circuit of Illinois, covered by Lincoln in his days as a circuit riding lawyer in the forties and fifties.

Its appellation was acquired from the frequent visits there of such figures as Stephen A. Douglas, Robert G. Ingersoll and Lincoln.

Many are the tales told by pioneers of the tall, magnetic young lawyer who tried cases often in the courtroom and achieved considerable local fame as a story-teller in the old Metamora tavern after court hours.

The courthouse was constructed when Metamora won a fight for the county seat. Later the town lost the distinction and the old structure was deemed to be the state of Illinois. Now it is a Lincoln shrine.

Native forests furnished the timbers used in the structure. The roof is of hand-split walnut shingles. The timbers are sawed oak and walnut logs. Finished for use in 1845. It was the pride of the community and the envy of other towns.

Within the massive brick walls the voice of Lincoln was heard at almost every term of court from 1845 to 1857, the "old docket" shows.

Ingersoll enjoyed a large practice before the bar in the old courthouse. Judge Samuel H. Treat was the first jurist to hold court in the newly organized county. He afterward became a federal judge.

and is quite proud of the progress made by his proteges. He announces that anyone who wants to join the band should do so on.

Funeral services will be held here Friday morning for Egbert Pias who died Tuesday morning after a lingering illness. He was 71 years old, and has lived in the Crooked Finger county the last 18 years. Services will be conducted at the St. Mary's church, with burial to be made in the Calvary cemetery.

Mr. Pias is a native of Germany, coming with his wife to this country in 1908. They spent a few months in Kentucky and Minnesota, a year in California, and then came to their home in this section.

He is survived by his widow, Johanna Pias, and seven children, Marie, Erhard, John, Gesina, Gertrude, Henrietta and Berard.

All's friends have chosen his middle name, Emanuel, meaning "God with us," as the watch word of his campaign (if any). We recall that the phrase, in slightly different form, was used as the war cry of one of the nations participating in the world conflict. There must have been some mistake.—McMinville Telephone Register.
