In another statement the nine men and one woman, who took part in the round table discussion joined in declaring they were 'pleased with the governor's interest in and understanding of the agricultural problem."

Stand Not Announced They made no reference in this statement as to their intentionh during the campaign.

Arrangements for the meeting were made by George N. Peek, of Illinois, chairman of the so-called farm committee of 22, and a champion of the McNary-Haugen bill, which was turned down by President Coolidge, who assailed, in particular, its equalization fee provisions.

Peek sat in on the conference as did Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois agricultural association; Frank W.
