

AMERICAN YOUNGSTERS BEAT TENNIS VETERANS

Valley Baseball Title Will be Decided Today or on Monday

SALEM-ALBANY DUEL NEAR END

Russell and Fortier Likely
Principals In First Game
At Linn City

TELEGRAM LINEUPS TODAY
Salem, 2b; Keber, 3b; Jenkins, 4b;
McReynolds, 1b; Weller, 1b;
Hicks, ss; Sullivan, 1b;
Gib, 2b; Patterson, rf;
Olinger, lf; Stratmeyer, 3b;
Heenan, cf; Hesfeld, 2b;
Edwards, c; Williamson, c;
Foster, p.

Every time the Salem and Albany Willamette Valley league baseball teams have met this season, the interest has centered primarily in the pitchers' duel between Johnny Beck of Salem and Ralph Coleman, the Albany flinger.

Today's game will be different in that Beck, at least, won't be in the lineup, and the indications are that Red Rupert, Albany manager, will adopt like tactics and reserve Coleman for the Labor day game.

At that it will be pretty much a battle of wits, for it either of the managers finds a moment when he can slip in his star twirler to advantage, far enough along in the game that the pitcher will not have to exert himself too much to be in shape the following day, the chances are he will do it.

Pitchers Effective

It's hardly safe to predict, however, that this game won't be a pitchers' duel just as much as any of the others, for both Russell and Fortier have done effective mound work this year; Russell had the house of David sluggers guessing when they played here in May, and it was Fortier who held Bend to two runs in the famous game that never was finished at Albany, about the same time. Since then they haven't been called on often, but each has performed capably when he did get the chance. Russell pitched the best game at Bend that any of the valley league pitchers have negotiated, and if his support from a patched up infield hadn't weakened, the Bend team's record of no defeats at home might have been spoiled.

Half Title at Stake

At any rate the long delayed first half championship of the league will be decided either today or tomorrow. Incidentally, the actual championship of the Willamette Valley is at stake, as Bend, though a member of the league, isn't a valley town.

Except for the absence of Quinn, who found it necessary to leave for Pendleton to begin preparations for his coaching work, the Senators will be at maximum strength here Monday, and the final game of the series, whether it is the deciding game or just an exhibition, ought to be real baseball. Beck and Coleman will resume their heretical duel to see which can fool the greatest number of opposing batsmen, with the "dope" slightly favoring Beck on account of his 15 strikeout record set last Sunday.

BEAVERS TAKE 10 TO 0 DEFEAT

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Johnny Couch held his former team mates, the Portland Beavers, to six scattered hits here today and pelted the Hollywood Stars to a 10 to 0 victory.

While Couch pitched effective ball his Hollywood mates pounded Jack Knight and Tiny Goodbred for a total of 14 hits, which combined with four errors contributed by the Beavers, gave the Stars their easy win.

Score: R. H. E.
Portland 0 6 4
Hollywood 14 0

Knight, Goodbred and Whitney; Couch and Bassler.

Sacs Whip Angels

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Sacramento stepped ahead in the series with Los Angeles here today winning 4 to 1 with little effort. Laura Vinci had the Angels shackled all the way yielding but five hits.

Score: R. H. E.

Los Angeles 1 5 0
Sacramento 4 10 0

Barfoot and Hannah; Vinci and Severeld.

Indiana Drop One

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Harry Krause and Andy House, an old and young alumnus of St. Mary's college, opposed each other on the mound today and the former won when the Missions defeated Seattle, 7-5.

Score: R. H. E.

Seattle 5 7 2

Missions 7 8 0

House and Ainsmith; Krause and Baldwin.

Seals Crush Oaks

OAKLAND, Sept. 1.—(AP)—The Seals lined up solidly behind Elmer Jacobs today and pounded out 11 to 5 win over Oakland. A five run rally in the fourth put the San Francisco team in the lead while three more counters in the sixth added substantially to the margin.

Score: R. H. E.

San Francisco 11 15 1

Oakland 6 13 3

Jacobs and Sprins; Shee and Lombardi.

It requires a lot of people to make an automobile, but earning money to make the payments on it usually falls to the lot of just one man.—Sethelin Sun.

A privately owned Dodge recently completed a transcontinental trip in a fraction over 76 hours. The owners reported no mechanical trouble of any kind.

When the gasoline station attendant wipes off your windshield, ask him to wipe off your headlamps too. This is invaluable for night driving.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

It was explained by a number of speakers that many of the national banks had not objected to the payment of the capital stock tax, but that they felt the present federal law should be compiled with or repealed. The courts held that national bank stock was not taxable under the federal act.

Officials said that the proposed amendment to the federal statute probably would be drafted before the end of the year in order that it may be submitted to congress at its next regular session. The Oregon delegation in congress will be urged to support the amendment.

This was announced here Saturday by Earle Fisher, state tax commissioner, following his return from Seattle where he attended the national tax conference. He said the conference was attended by tax experts from many sections of the United States and that hundreds of tax problems were discussed.

The move to amend the federal statute relating to the taxation of capital stock of national banks followed by explanation that the United States district court for the state of Oregon had recently handed down a decree in which the banks were exempted from the payment of this tax.

</