At the Theaters

The sparkling golf comedy called "Green Grass Widows" showing Sunday and Monday at the Oregon theatre, is from an original story by Wellyn Totman, one of the youngest screen writers, who has constructed a smooth, veracious yarn about a golf champion who goes broke on Wall street and hies himself off to a prize tournament to recoup his fortunes. The champion's entrance apparently blasts the hopes of the local champion, who is desperately in need of the $5,000 prize in order to finish his college course and win the girl of his dreams. The surprise finish is said to lift "Green Grass Widows" far above the usual comedy type, and furnish some real thrills even to those who haven't fallen victim to the insidious little golf bug.

Romance and drama are brilliantly blended in "The Mating Call," Thomas Meighan's latest starring film-play which will open at the Elsinore theatre Sunday. Adapted from the popular novel of the same name by Rex Beach, "The Mating Call" is one of the most thrilling, and at the same time, most romantic celluloid dramas that has come to the screen in many months. It affords Meighan one of the greatest characterizations of his career. "The Mating Call" is rich in love-interest, and Meighan is presented with dual feminine support in the pretty persons of Evelyn Brent and Rejee Adoree. Miss Brent is a charming and ultra-sophisticated society queen and Miss Adoree a comely Russian immigrant girl.

Fanchon and Marco in their "Trip to Mars" Idea have staged a show that's different. Every minute of the production is crammed full of surprises, laughs and fun. Dances, silly songs, weird music and what not! The most unusual stage show of this season. Lynn Cowan, one of Fanchon and Marco's favorite band leaders and a prominent popular song writer wrote the music for this "idea." Maxine and Evelyn, Andy Rice Jr., and Charlie Meyers are others who will contribute clever bits of entertainment. All in all the stage fare of the Elsinore theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday is going to be most unusual.
