HOPE DIES OUT AS RAIN FALLS

Sewer Nuisance Certain to go Over to Next Summer Now

Tuesday's rain, which generally is believed to mark the end of this year's dry season for Salem, quenched the last spark of hope entertained by residents along the river front that the sewer nuisance will be abolished this year.

Utterly unconscious of any discrepancy in its reasoning, state officialdom has argued that if its sewer is extended farther under the river's surface the obnoxious odor will continue but that if the water rises above the sewer's mouth it will cease.

Residents along Water street who have endured the repulsive sewer stench most of the summer have virtually given up hope that any action will be taken to relieve the situation.

"If anything at all could be done about it we certainly would do it," said H. D. Hubbard, who lives at the west end of Marion street. "The odor has been extremely offensive for more than a month. There is no question in my mind but that it comes from the state sewer rather than that of the city."

"Two years ago we had a season of very low water, with more or less the same situation resulting. At that time a crew of patients from the state hospital was sent down to build a neck at the mouth of the sewer, and conditions improved at once. A short time after this the city also had its sewer extended."

"Last year the river did not fall so low, and the odor never became so objectionable."

A reason for the state's inactivity in the matter has also been suggested. Since hospital patients would be used for the job and would be paid no wages, no opportunity presents itself to give anyone a job. Besides, no amount of wages could make it the kind of a job state officials like to hand out.

Kiwanians View Motion Pictures Taken In Salem

Motion pictures taken recently by Dr. David B. Hill of local activities, including those at the playgrounds, were shown at the Kiwanis club luncheon Tuesday noon.

Following a report by Dr. George H. Alden, chairman, on the work of the committee which has been studying the proposal to change Salem's form of government, the same committee was authorized to continue. Dr. Alden explained that nothing had been accomplished because of the failure to representatives of other civic organizations to agree to the principle of selecting the city council at large.

The Rev. W. Earl Cochran, pastor of the recently organized Calvary Baptist church, sang two solos.

Dr. Brown Looks After Health of Stanford Squad

When Stanford university football players trot out onto the gridiron at Palo Alto Saturday, the person who knows most about their physical condition will be Dr. Walter H. Brown, who was until about a year ago director of the Marion county child health demonstration.

In connection with his duties as campus health director at Stanford Dr. Brown has the task of examining all of the athletic candidates to their fitness for strenuous competition, and he also watches their health and gives first aid treatment in case of injuries. He will be an important factor in Stanford football this fall.

This isn't new work to Dr. Brown, as he performed similar service to Salem high school athletes while here, in the role of school physician.

Rain Halts Work On City Streets

The soaking rain which fell Tuesday halted all street construction in Salem. Walter Low, street commissioner, reported, "About 100 men on the grading, paving and curb construction crews were idle, but it is expected that work may be resumed within one or two days if the rain does not continue. The large paving plant is on Wilson street and the smaller one on North 13th, which is nearly completed. About 100 blocks have been paved, and Mr. Low expects to finish 25 blocks more if steady rain does not begin too early."

CLEVER FILM PLAY FEATURE AT OREGON

The oft-suspected fact that modern mothers are not so different from the mothers of a few years ago was proven to theatre patrons in attendance at the presentation of "Modern Mothers" at the Oregon theatre last night.

"Modern Mothers" is an engrossing drama of the unselfish devotion of a mother for her child and the tragedy and emptiness of a life where the mother has given up her child to follow a career.

Based on a brilliant play that attained by Adelle Rayton (Helene Chadwick), an actress known throughout two continents, meant little in comparison with the love of her daughter, Mildred (Barbara Kent) who knew Adelle's sister as her mother, and her mother merely as an acquaintance.

The part of David, "old enough to write plays and young enough to think that he could sell them," with whom Mildred and her mother found themselves in love, was taken by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

This interesting film, full of novel situations cleverly handled, and augmented with an unusually amusing Hal Roach comedy, is billed for showing at the Oregon again tonight.

SALEM LIONS VISIT INDEPENDENCE CLUB

INDEPENDENCE, Ore., Sept. 11.—(Special)—Members of the Salem Lions club were special guests of the Independence Lions club at Monday luncheon. The Salem delegation included A. C. Haag, president; C. A. Swope, secretary; Harry Scott and Merrill D. Ohling, past presidents; C. F. Giese, deputy district governor, and others.

The luncheon was held in the dining room of the Hotel Monmouth in Monmouth, the Beaver hotel dining room, the regular meeting place, being closed temporarily following the recent hotel fire.

The Salem, Independence and Corvallis clubs are cooperating to establish a radio set in the Children's Farm home in Corvallis. A committee of one from each club was appointed to meet in Corvallis Friday evening, September 14, to complete the plans.

FEW CHANGES SEEN IN SALEM SCHOOLS

Opening of the new auto mechanic building at the Salem senior high school will be the greatest change in the public school buildings and faculty, when the buildings open Monday, September 24.

There will be only two additional teachers this year in the school system. A new teacher at Washington grade school, and a new teacher in the commercial department at the senior high school.

A slight change in the southern boundary for Washington school to relieve congestion at Park school is being planned. A fifth grade room at Lincoln school which last year had only four grades will be secured for the fall semester by the addition of sufficient pupils in that district announced Superintendent Hug Tuesday.

A complete renovation of the senior high school, the Parrish and Leslie junior high schools and the nine grade schools, Garfield, Grant, Englewood, High and Lincoln, McKinley, Park, Richmond and Washington has made all the Salem public schools in splendid condition for the opening of school. These buildings have been tinted, kalemimed, varnished and repairs have been made wherever necessary.

Only a slight increase in the registration is expected for the opening of school according to Superintendent George W. Hug. Last year there were 1203 students in the senior high school, 1460 in the two junior high schools, and 2804 in the nine grade schools. This made a total of 5467 registered in the Salem public schools.

The teaching force will include 55 teachers in the senior high school, 60 teachers in the junior high schools, and 77 teachers in the nine grade schools, a total of 192 teachers on the city payroll.
