Office Holders and Office Seekers Converge on Roundup City

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 18,-(AP)-Pendleton has become the meeca of officials and observers. A general exodus of office-holders, politicians and the politicallyminded to the round-up city got under way today and indications were that soon there will be as many politicians as vaqueros at eastern Oregon metropolis. Frem Governor Pattreson down to the lobbyists, all will be congregated in the round-up grandstand during the afternoons, rubbing elwas on the main street in the brenoon, and discussing affairs of state at night.

The state board of control is headed for Pendleton. It will inspect the branch state hospital there Friday and Saturday.

A. W. Norblad who has the suppost of eastern Oregon senators for president of the state senate. is reported as going to Pendleton to meet his colleagues, and Ralph S. Hamilton, who is supposed to have enough votes to elect him speaker of the house, is headed for the rodeo.

Several members of the Multhouse, intend going and finding out what is planned for the legislature in the way of taxation and automobile legislation.

Oregon politics who will be present are: Phil Metschan, republican state chairman; W. C. Culbertson, democratic state chairman; Floyd Cook, republican state secretary; Fred E. Kiddle, state senator; R. R. Butler, republican candidate for congressman from second district; Walter M. Pierce,

The group left Salem September not start at the scheduled time, tomobile at Vale. and had packed back 18 miles in the reserve before the nearest forest ranger rode seven miles on September 10 to notify them that the season was still closed. They started out immediately but with only three horses instead of the eight that had taken them in, the journey was slow and before they had gone many miles rain began to fall, a forest ranger allowing them to stay at his cabin over night. Following the rain, came notification that they could hunt. Five inches of snow fell from the night of September 11 to noon the next day, the realtor said. Other members of the party in-
