

JUSTICE RAND KIWANIS GUEST

Able Talks on Constitution
Feature Observance of Anniversary

Establishment of equality for all citizens before the law, abolishing aristocracy and special privilege, was the new thing in the United States constitution which made its adoption the most momentous occurrence of history, Justice John L. Rand of the Oregon supreme court said in his address which was a part of the Constitution day observance at the Kiwanis club luncheon Tuesday.

Americans are likely to forget that their liberties have not always existed, Justice Rand said. Less than 200 years ago, Herbert Hoover would have been short of his ears in certain American colonies if he had advocated the doctrines of the Friends faith; and Al Smith, if he had lived in England at the same time, would have been hanged for his religious beliefs without a trial.

Equal Liberties

The assurance of equal liberties in the constitution is responsible for this nation's advance to the position of the richest and happiest nation of the world, Justice Rand concluded.

Justice O. P. Coshaw approached the subject of the constitution from the historical angle in his talk. The convention which framed the constitution was not called for that purpose, but to bring about an agreement between the 13 independent nations on the Atlantic seaboard, whereby the jealousies and differences which had arisen might be prevented from precipitating war. Virginia took the initiative, and George Washington was a central figure although he made few remarks other than those necessary as chairman.

Divine Guidance Asked

With all of America's great statesmen of that day present, the constitution was framed only after three months of bitter conflict within the secrecy of the convention room; and it was Benjamin Franklin, often classed as an atheist, who frequently asked that divine guidance be invoked in order to prevent disruption of the gathering.

There the battle between the advocates of states' rights and centralization of government was fought out, Judge Coshaw stated; the smaller colonies proving more stubborn in clinging to their sovereignty, so that Rhode Island did not ratify the constitution until several years after it went into effect.

NEW RELIGIOUS SECTS GROWING

Old Church Leaders Fear
Organization Passing
Into Eclipse

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Whether Christian leadership of the Pacific coast will be held by the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian denominations, or by three relatively newer sects, Christian Science, Mormon and Seventh Day Adventist, was discussed today by Dr. William J. Michie of San Francisco, president of the Pacific Slope Congregational congress, when it assembled for its three-day session here.

A study of census reports shows, Dr. Michie said, that the newer sects have gained on the Pacific coast, 717 churches during the years 1916 to 1926. Christian Science has gained 342, Mormon 327 and Seventh Day Adventists, 48.

"This gain of 717 operating units during a ten year period on this Pacific slope," Dr. Michie said, "is in remarkable contrast to the loss of 506 operating units in the Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal and Presbyterian denominations."

Scope of the work of the Congregational churches on the Pacific coast, including its obligation to home and in the mission field, is being studied at the congress. Representatives of churches in Oregon, Washington, California, Utah and Idaho are attending the conference.

SCHEDULE CUTS ELECTRIC RATES

Reductions Range From Ten to Thirty Per Cent in Report Given

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Reductions of from ten to thirty per cent in industrial power rates were contained in a schedule submitted to the chamber of commerce today by Portland Electric companies. If approved by the public service commission of Oregon, the new tariff will give Portland rates in all cases as low and in most cases, lower, than rates in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle, according to analysis by the industries department of the chamber.

A saving of approximately $63,000 a year would be effected for the seventeen Portland users who would come within the terms of the new tariff, L. T. Morwin, vice president and general manager of the Northwestern Electric company, said.

The proposed tariff was submitted voluntarily by the power companies and resulted from a series of conferences between officials of the utilities and the industries committee of the chamber.

The schedule will not effect pending investigations by the city and public service commission into electric rates here.

Industrial loads of 375 kilowatts or more are affected by the proposed tariff. A further concession by the utilities allows the Portland user current for lighting at power rates up to 25 per cent of the power demand. This, it was said, would cover lighting needs of all present users in the city.

The schedule would reduce the present top rate from five cents a kilowatt hour for the first 10,000 kilowatt hours, to three and one-half cents for the first thousand kilowatt hours. The present bottom rate of eight mills would be reduced to two and one-half mills a kilowatt hour, existing discounts for prompt payment would be discontinued.
