

INDIAN TRIBE ADOPTS CURTIS

Candidate Cites Note Written by Wilson in Defense of Hoover

BILLINGS, Mont., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Cheered on by Indians whose tribes once chased him with bow and arrow, Senator Charles Curtis, the republican vice-presidential nominee, waged the republican campaign in Montana today in speeches at Hardin and here.

For the first time since taking the stump, the nominee referred to declarations that Herbert Hoover was responsible for fixing the price of wheat during the war. At Hardin and here he read a message of President Wilson stating that Mr. Hoover, as food administrator during the war, "at his express wish, has taken no part in the deliberations of the committee on whose recommendation I determine the government's fair price, nor has he in any way influenced an opinion regarding that price."

Ceremony Held

But the high point of a busy day for Senator Curtis was his visit this morning with the Crows, Blackfeet and Cheyenne Indians. At solemn ceremonies the venerable Chief Plenty Coos, of the Crow nation, waded his scaple stick over the head of "my dear boy," the formally adopted Charles Curtis, of the Kaws, into his tribe. The ceremony took place at the Hardin fair grounds and Chief Plenty Coos, who represented the Indians of America at the burial of the unknown soldier, delivered a message to his brave through an interpreter. He is 89 years old and his voice was only a whisper, but he waved his arms vigorously as he told the Indians, "anything we can do for my boy from the Kaw country we must do."

Feathers Old Fight

We placed the feathered head dress on Curtis, who responded with a speech to his new Indian brothers, thanking them and urging them to regard seriously the responsibilities of citizenship readily given them. And he recalled how as a boy of eight he was attacked with his Kaw kinsmen by the Cheyennes.

"You saved the life of us then," Curtis told the Cheyennes today. "I am glad to shake hands with you instead of dodging your arrows."

"The old days are gone forever," said Chief Plenty Coos. "The buffalo are gone. We are met with new propositions and new times. We have with us today one whom we can safely follow as our standard bearer. Anything we can do for you, my boy, we are going to do it."

The senator, whose mother was a grand daughter of White Plume, chief of the Kaws, grasped the hand of the venerable chief and his voice was husky as he spoke words of counsel to the Indians.

After the Indian ceremony a business luncheon was served at the fair grounds and then Senator Curtis addressed a throng of Montana folk who had assembled in the grand stand. Amplifiers carried his voice as he lauded the record of the republican administration and proposed higher tariff rates on agriculture as one means of aiding the agricultural situation. He was applauded frequently by the enthusiastic audience.

Commissioner's Recall Is Sought

ASTORIA, Ore., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Petitions demanding the recall of W. A. Tyler, port commissioner, were in circulation here today. The factions backing the recall declare Tyler, a former bank president here, has established a home and business in Portland. Should he remain as port commissioner for the next 15 days, the voters would not have the opportunity to vote for an alternate.

There need be no problem about whether the Froewater justice of the peace who has gone to Seattle to reside left his post permanently or temporarily; people who leave Umatilla county do so temporarily.—Pendleton East Oregonian.

Gov. Smith Takes Fling At Herbert Hoover and Whole Republican Party

By PAUL F. HAUPER

Associated Press Staff Writer DENVER, Colo., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Again training his guns on Herbert Hoover as he discussed water power in a campaign speech here tonight, Gov. Alfred E. Smith declared that the benefit of the development of power sites "should accrue to the people themselves and that we should not permit them to fall into private hands for private development, which means private gain at the expense of all the users of the energy."

The democratic nominee, in an address prepared for delivery in the coliseum where Bryan twenty years ago was nominated for president for the third time, insisted that the republican platform declaration on water power was unsatisfactory, and asserted that the acceptance speech of his opponent did not contain "one single word on the question of water power development" and that Mr. Hoover failed in his recent Los Angeles speech to make his stand clear.

Coolidge Criticized

Governor Smith also assailed President Coolidge for vetoing the Muscle Shoals bill without an explanation of its rejection and for making the declaration in a message to congress that the Muscle Shoals question seemed to have "assumed a place out of all proportion with its real importance."

The New York governor's prepared speech said that "inaction on the part of the federal government, the strange silence of the candidate and the meaningless plank of the republican platform indicate, to say the least, a sympathy with the widespread propaganda against public ownership spread throughout the country by an organization known as the 'joint committee of the national electric associations.'"

Hoover Held Guilty Also

"The federal trade commission in its investigation of public utility corporations," the democratic nominee asserted, "has developed some facts which indicate that Mr. Hoover knew of the existence of this power lobby intended to influence congressional action and legislation."

Mr. Smith said that "the job by its executive director, Judge Davison, formerly was an assistant secretary of commerce under Mr. Hoover; that Paul S. Clapp, once a secretary to Mr. Hoover, was named secretary of the joint committee and is the executive director of the National Electric Light association, which, he explained, is one of the three groups making up the joint committee; and that former Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin, who, he said, was retained by the joint committee as counsel to oppose the Walsh resolution for an investigation of public utilities operations, was also so."

West Also Attacked

Governor Smith also laid down a barrage on Roy O. West, present secretary of the interior, and H. Edmund Machold, the new chairman of the New York state republican committee.

"West," he said, "for almost a jurator of a century has been closely identified with important power companies," and the nominee asked:

"Is it not a fair argument to assume that such an appointment indicates a spirit of unfriendliness, if not hostility, on the part of the republican party in nation to those who stand for public ownership and control of the God-given resources of the nation?"

Machold Also Flayed

As for Machold, the nominee referred to him as "the most bitter opponent of public ownership and control of water power" in New York state. He said Machold used all his influence and strength in the legislature to oppose the adoption of the constructive, forward-looking program of state ownership and control, and until the very day he was selected chairman was affiliated with many of the largest private water power companies in the state."

Turning to the Boulder canyon dam problem, in which Colorado and the other six states in the Colorado River basin are directly interested, Gov. Smith called for "immediate action." With regard to Muscle Shoals he reiterated a belief that the government should continue "the full and complete operation" of the plant in Alabama, "retaining it under government ownership and control."

Boulder Protection Asked

As for the Boulder dam, the nominee said that "the site of the dam and the machinery generating this water power must be preserved in public ownership."

"Never should this priceless right be given away for private exploitation," he added, "and in whatever form the power generated at Boulder dam shall be distributed, public authority must retain the contractual rights of control by contract the fair and reasonable distribution of the power to be generated."

"This does not mean," he explained, "that the government, national or state, is required to engage in the business of distributing electrical energy, but it does mean that by virtue of this ownership, both of site and of plant, the government shall have a contractual as well as a regulatory right to insist upon reasonable rates and equitable distribution."

D. A. R. to Put Up Large Memorial

MEDFORD, Ore., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A marker to the memory of General Joseph E. Lane, and commemorating the signing of the treaty of peace with the Rogue River Indians, will be unveiled at Table Rock here next Tuesday afternoon, under the auspices of the Crater Lake chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Joseph E. Lane chapter of the organization. The Southern Oregon Pioneer Society will be special guests at the ceremony. Governor Patterson has been invited to attend.

WINTER BOXING TO START HERE SOON

For the first time in several years, there will be no boxing card in Salem in connection with state fair week. Matchmaker Harry Plant has announced that inasmuch as boxing has been a fair was under way in past years, he would not repeat the experiment this year.

The regular winter boxing program will start within a few weeks, however, Mr. Plant promises. One prospect is that Willie Gordon and Ted Fox will be the main events on the first card, but there is nothing definite about this year.

Gordon, in a telephone conversation with the matchmaker last week, said he was willing, and John Orr, Fox's manager, also welcomes the idea, but wants Fox to have time for several weeks training before going up against a man of Gordon's calibre.

If Fox should win from Gordon, the matchmaker's next move would be an effort to get Phil Bayne to return and meet the independence boy.

Outlines Stand

Declaring that all men engaged in affairs likely to be affected by a national administration should define their political stand in public, Felix Warburg, international banker and philanthropist, expressed himself as being unreservedly for Herbert Hoover. He called the republican candidate "unquestionably the ablest man we have."

Cranberry Crop 525,000 Barrels

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The total crop of cranberries in the United States this year was estimated by the New England crop reporting service as 525,000 barrels. With the exception of last year's short crop this will be the highest since 1921. Recent reports indicate that the Massachusetts crop will total 225,000 barrels as compared with 370,000 barrels harvested last year. The berries are expected to be of medium size in most places. Quality and keeping prospects are very good.
