Salem's Wholesalers Report
Demand for Imported
Vegetables Grown

Business for the Salem wholesalers showed a slight improvement this week, with grocers finding a greater demand for the imported fruits and vegetables now that most of the farmers' produce has been disposed of.

Wholesale quotations in the vegetable commodities continue about the same, with the exception of cucumbers which have taken an upward trend now that the outdoor ones are all gone and the market is dependent entirely upon the hot house cukes. These are quoted at $1.35 and $1.60 with a fair demand.

Brussels sprouts are quite plentiful although shipped in from California and are excellent quality. These are quoted at 18 cents a pound wholesale, with an occasional store selling them at the figure also, or two pounds for 35 cents.

Green Peppers Disappear
Local green peppers are practically a thing of the past, with imports of good quality and large supply in the trade at 10 cents a pound from the stores, or three pounds for 25 cents.

Cauliflower is not offered in large quantities, but that in evidence is good.

Banana, golden delicious, and Hubbard squash are all quoted at 2 1/2 cents a pound wholesale, with Marbled and Danish at three and four cents, respectively. A golden Hubbard squash is selling at 5 cents a pound in the stores, but is not so plentiful as other varieties. A medium size banana squash will cost about 30 cents and the small squash may be purchased as low as six for 25 cents. Tomatoes, hot house ones, sell at two pounds for 15 cents. The California tomato is quoted at $3 per lug and locals at $1.10 a box. Sweet potatoes range around six pounds for 25 cents at the stores. The Irish potato continues the same as last week. Yakima gems, No. 2's, selling as low as 95 cents a sack.

Parsnip Prices High
Parsnips are the most expensive of the root vegetables, selling at three pounds for 25 cents and a little better. Carrots are selling six pounds for 19 cents as the cheapest offering, but in the main they are five cents a bunch. Turnips are also six pounds for 19 cents. Beets run about 5 cents a bunch.

Spinach continues to sell for 5 cents a pound and is large and coarse appearing, but works up well for greens notwithstanding. Cabbage sells from 2 to 2 1/2 cents a pound, depending upon what store it is bought at.

Local beans are off the market and California is beginning to ship beans on which the wholesale price is 20 cents a pound. Local lettuce continues at $1.50 a crate, with the California offerings in greater demand and of better quality at $4.50, wholesale.

A good grade of onions sells as low as six pounds for 25 cents.

Newport Invites Hoover to Visit

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The (AP)—The Newport board of aldermen voted today to invite President-elect Hoover to choose Newport as the site of the summer White House. Mayor Mortimer A. Sullivan suggested that the Marble House mansion, home of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and unoccupied for some time, would be suitable for the purpose. A formal invitation to Mr. Hoover will be sent.

FRUIT MARKET IS INACTIVE

Approach of Holiday Season
Expected to Bring
Price Advances

It is growing to the time of year when fruits are not so numerous and the variety is at a standstill. What is missing in variety will be made up in prices changing as the holiday season approaches nearer and nearer.

There is no change in the apple situation, with a good grade of most varieties being offered at $1.19 and thereabouts, and the choice packs of these proportionately higher. The Delicious holds the top in prices, being quoted wholesale from $1.75 to $3.50, according to grade. Windfalls may be had for 69 cents a box, and cheaper in a few instances.

Cranberries Steady
Despite the outlook for higher prices on cranberries, prices remain about the same this week as last, with a notable exception of one store selling them six cents under last week's low price of 2 pounds for 45 cents. This week's low price is 2 pounds for 39 cents, other stores selling at two for 45 cents and 25 cents straight.

Tokays, the most popular grape, continue to sell at three pounds for 25 cents in most instances, although in one store they are offered at four pounds for 23 cents.

Florida grapefruit is the same, 15 cents apiece or two for 29 cents. The Arizona grapefruit may be bought at three for 25 cents. A good grade lemons costs 39 cents a dozen and oranges in the larger sizes run at least 75 cents.

Pomegranates are quoted at 8 cents by the commission houses. A few watermelons and ice cream melons hang on at 2 and 1 1/2 cents, respectively.

Bananas remain steady, except for the occasional cheaper offering to avoid throwing old fruit away entirely.

500 Ft. Free Parking Space

Once Upon a Time

Before there was a market building in Salem—people were compelled to drive their cars from block to block and from one street to another looking for a place to park. Often they were compelled to park three or four blocks from where they wanted to shop. After this ordeal of bumping fenders and bucking traffic they would do their shopping and lug their purchases back to the car, and if it was their lucky day they would find their car about as they left it except one overtime parking tag and a few bent fenders. But now they drive right up to the very door of The Market where there is always plenty of room for everyone. And 'tis said by thousands that at the Market things cost less.
