Strong Minority Party Necessary for Good Government, He Says

agement or misconduct of the government. A political party is organized to help the country and not merely to achieve victory. It survives not on the basis of the reward it secures for its followers but on the strength and soundness of the principles for which it stands. A political party can only justify its existence insofar as it operates for the purpose of promoting the welfare, the wellbeing and the best interest of the people.

"The principles for which the democratic party stands are as great in defeat as they would have been in victory, and it is our duty to carry on and vindicate the principles for which we fought. The democratic party today is the great liberal party of the nation. It leads the progressive thought in all the countries. It holds out the only hope of return of the fundamental principles on which this country was built and as a result of which it has grown and thrived. Appeal Made For

Support From Youth

To the young men and women of the country, the democratic party with its fine traditions, and its breadth of vision, offers the only inspiration. The democratic party would not be in a position four years from now to solicit the confidence and the support of the American people, if during that period it neglected to build up a constructive program and relied entirely upon the failure of the opposition party. That cannot be done by the minority party permitting itself to become a party of destruction and opposition for political purposes only. We have seen too much of that in this country and in many of its civil divisions. It has been particularly noticeable in the state of New York where great forward-looking constructive measures were delayed for years by parties in opposition seeking to withhold from the democratic party credit for their accomplishments."

At the Theaters

'Rose Marie,' New Musical Gem, Due Soon at Elsinore

"Rose Marie," the gem of musical comedies, that has been anxiously awaited, will come to the Elsinore theatre November 23.

"Rose Marie" has so prospered that it is easy to explain that audiences like the play because it is one of the best shows of the type that has been put on the stage in recent years. People flock to it because it is good, wholesome entertainment.

In planning "Rose Marie," Arthur Hammerstein broke away from the routine of musical comedies and prepared a piece that was different. All the action takes place in Canada, and for the first time the Dominion is seen translated into the language and settings of operatic realism.

The score supplied by Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothart for this musical play has all the charm that one associates with these two noted composers of music. The songs that linger in the memory are "Rose Marie" and the lovely "Indian Lullaby."

There is a comic song about kissing that the business helps along, and the "Totem Tom-Tom" number for the chorus gives opportunity for some original and bizarre dancing effects.

Virginia Fox is the prima donna, and Paul Donah, who will be seen in the role of Jim Kenyon, has an excellent tenor. Other important members of the cast are Mira Niraka, Charles Meakins, Peggy Pates, Houston Richards, Ross Gibson, Samy Man, Darryl Gibson, Gus Buell and 90 others, including a symphony orchestra.

Manhattan Drama Shows at Oregon

The Manhattan Players fill their Salem engagement this week-end at the Oregon theatre while the Elsinore houses the popular war-time aviation romance "Lilac Time."

The Manhattan play in "News-papers and Slippers," wherein an old-fashioned couple are contrasted with a man and his wife that consider themselves the latest thing out. Somewhere in between these two extremes is a happy medium that those who see the play will appreciate in the last act.

Oregon Features Moore on Screen

Dorothy Revier, who is featured with Matt Moore and Roy D'Arcy in Columbia's "Beware of Blondes" which is coming to the Oregon theatre today, danced her way into the limelight with the Olga Moskova troupe of dancers. Her father, Thomas Valera, had achieved an enviable reputation as a musician; while an aunt, Ida Valera was well known as an operatic star. Dorothy made her screen debut under the direction of Harry Revier. At first she was cast in ingenue roles, but soon became known as a vamp. Her repertory to portray other roles went unheeded until she was placed under contract by Columbia Pictures. Since then she has projected lands-

LET'S LIVE!

READ THIS FIRST: Several disturbing elements had already entered the life of Byrd Hamilton, who had just married the arrogant, irresistible Larry Browning. They were spending the night at the Blackstone in Cincinnati, where Larry's friends, who had come to attend their wedding, were giving a party in their honor. When the party had reached a high pitch in the crowded room, Byrd found that this fast-moving crowd had no interest in her. When she discovered India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's, and Larry sitting dangerously close together, she interpreted her anxiety as jealousy.

the romance in aviation came with the pioneers that ventured so spectacularly into the unknown. But now that aeronautics are getting beyond the pioneer stage, that phase of a great industry, necessary for a while, is being lost.

J. HUGH WARD, bookkeeper at the county clerk's office, said: "From all I can gather about aviation it is just as practical and devoid of romance as any other industry. The fact that we still think of it in terms of romance means merely that it is still too new to be commonplace. There is romance in anything if you look at it that way, but usually we don't look at it that way except when we are unfamiliar with it."

BRAZIER SMALL, Salem justice of the peace, and naval aviator during the World War, said: "There are two times when you get a thrill out of flying. The first occurs when you go up for the first time. The second comes when, all by yourself, with nobody to operate the plane except you and God, you first climb into the pilot's seat and take off."

Ralph Hamilton of Bend will give an address on "The General Tax of Reclamation Project Lands."
The reports of committees will be submitted at Friday afternoon's session. This will be followed by election of officers. Virtually all of Friday's sessions will be devoted to a discussion on the settlement and use of ary to me," said Larry, "hinting that I can't afford a week's honeymoon and a home, too."

His tone was quite ironical. Byrd's eyes fluttered down to her lap to hide the tears that had started.

"Big clump!" she scolded herself. "Larry's a successful business man. What do you know about his affairs anyway?"
Byrd was very sweet to him as the rest of the meal, eating whatever Larry ordered, and closing her eyes tightly when the bill was presented.

"Now we're going back to those shops and buy you some clothes," said Larry, with a determined air. "And if you yep about the price, I'll send you back to that hick town that gave you all these hayseed ideas!"
They entered the "Snobbiest Toggery," a shop owned by one Mrs. Majila Mogabgab, importer from Paris. A young hipless woman, with a Pekinese under her arm, eyed Byrd somewhat insolently, as she took her in from the crown of her little felt hat to the toe of her sensible shoe. After that look, thought Byrd, I'll let Larry buy the whole shop for me.

With a practiced eye, Larry chose three sport outfits for her, with shoes, stockings and hats to match, or not to match, as the madam advised. A swagger stick was the last note. Then, at another shop, they bought her a bathing suit in wo shades of orange, which seemed to catch the exact tones of her coppery hair. A cap and cape of black taffeta, trimmed with orange, and the darlinest little plaid sandals, Larry left their suite pocket, he said to her, "Well, let's drink to the next milestone on the old honeymoon," and filled two glasses.

Byrd wished that Larry wouldn't have to make an occasion out of everything, even a simple thing like a meal, and think he had to drink to it. She touched her glass several times in an effort to be a "good sport." But suddenly, as she glanced at the menu, she was glad for the long list of luncheon dishes, the price seemed to leap off the page and dance arrogantly before her eyes.

"Why, Larry," she exclaimed, breathlessly, "did you ever see such prices?"
Under frowning brows, Larry was looking this way and that, to see if she was being overheard.

"Cold consommé, sixty cents," continued Byrd, innocently, unaware of the pain she was causing Larry. "Cold chicken with potato salad, one dollar and serving forty-five cents. Why, just a price seem like a dollar. How are you ever going to get enough to eat?"
Her voice was incredulous. She was distinctly alarmed.

"Please lower your voice, dear. It may seem strange to these people, but you upset over what are ordinary hotel prices," he said, in a voice in which disapproval tinkled like tiny icicles.

"Well, to me they sound exorbitant," insisted Byrd. "And ridiculous, too. Do you think we can afford to stay here?" Her voice showed genuine worry. "There must be other places."
"Listen, Byrd. Please don't let the waiters know what you think." Larry eyed her perceptively, with his black eyes. "We wouldn't have come here if we prices seem able to afford it. In fact, the only people who do come here are those who are supposed to be able to pay the price."
"But, Larry, dearest, there's so many things we'll be needing when we go to housekeeping..." expostulated Byrd.
"You're not very complimentary

She smiled contentedly, as she looked at Larry across the white tablecloth, across the shining silver. But he was looking at her gown, and slowly shook his head. She was paralyzed with the thought that tomorrow Larry intended to buy her some evening gowns.

She quickly looked down at the menu, resolving to assume that bored expression that she saw on the faces of the people around her who wouldn't admit, for anything in the world, that a meal
