

Whitman Looms As Tough Obstacle For Willamette Eleven

THREE REMAIN IN TITLE RACE

Missionaries Show Power, Especially Overhead, in C.P.S. Game

If the Willamette Bearcats pass this week's serious hurdle, Pacific University, they will still be in the running for the Northwest conference football championship, but the outlook isn't particularly bright.

Whitman is in the lead and will stay there unless upset by College of Idaho Saturday or by Whitman in the game here Thanksgiving day; but if Whitman loses only to Willamette the local school will take the championship on the percentage basis, which the conference officials have ruled shall prevail.

Plays Fewer Games

This comes about because Whitman plays one less game this season than the other schools. If all predictions are overturned and College of Idaho beats Whitman Saturday, the Caldwell eleven will get the title.

Whitman is going to be a tough obstacle for either College of Idaho or Willamette to upset, according to reports of the 51 to 13 victory which the Missionaries scored against College of Puget Sound Monday.

Lindman Is Star

It was an aerial battle, with Lindman, Whitman right end, frequently in the limelight. He made some seemingly impossible catches and scored two touchdowns after receiving passes.

Whitman scored on the third play of the game; Reese, halfback, returned the kickoff 40 yards, Neilson, full, went around end for 20, and Bagley, the other halfback, carried the ball the rest of the way to the goal line.

Puget Sound Scores

Nig Borleske's men were caught napping a little later, however. Purvis of Puget Sound dashing 50 yards for a touchdown on a cut-back play. The rest of the first quarter was a see-saw affair, and both teams scored touchdowns early in the second quarter. Puget Sound scored when Garnero, guard, picked up a Whitman fumble and ran to the goal line.

After that Whitman opened up its passing attack and scored repeatedly. After a while Whitman's second team went into action, held the visitors even and scored one more touchdown.

W. U. ROOTERS PLAN PACIFIC EXCURSION

Tickets for the Willamette university excursion to Forest Grove on Saturday were put on sale Wednesday afternoon at the offices of the student body. Tickets for the game with Pacific university were also received Wednesday and are being sold at a special rate to students who go on the excursion train.

The Blue Key service fraternity announced that a large trophy will be presented to the class having the highest percentage of enrolled students making the trip, and indications were that this stimulus would make the ticket sale more brisk than ever.

The special train will leave from the campus at 9:30 Saturday morning and will arrive at McMinnville at 11:15, where the team will lunch. It will arrive at Forest Grove shortly before the opening of the game at 2 o'clock. The return trip will start soon after the game, probably about 5 o'clock, according to graduate manager Leslie Sparks.

AIRPLANE MODELS JUDGING IS TODAY

Model airplane interest is so keen among boys and young men in Salem that another contest prize has been offered for young men over 16 years of age by The Elsinore theatre.

Such excellent work has been accomplished by the new generation in Salem that experienced aviators who will judge the contest believe a useful purpose will be served by arranging to show the models to the public. The theatre management has arranged to close the contest and judge the model planes this afternoon at five o'clock in the lobby of the Elsinore. Judges are most prominent in aviation matters in Salem. Boys working on models that they wish to exhibit but not to have judged in the prize contest will be given another day to get them in.

The new prize for contestants over 16 is $3. Besides this prize, boys from 11 to 16 are eligible for four other prizes, a $5 cash prize for the first prize, an airplane ride over Salem for the second, $2 in cash for the third, and a special prize of $1 for the largest well-built model.

Every contestant entering a model airplane will be given a pass for two for the war-time aviation moving picture "Lilac Time," featuring Colleen Moore and Gary Cooper, at The Elsinore for days beginning Friday.

Plucky Stewardess Bears Up Well in Crisis; Takes Precious Shoes

was the water right on a level with my windows. There was water sloshing around on the floor of my cabin, too.

Injured Steward Gives First Report of Leak

"My steward came in, groaning, with a badly wrench shoulder. There was apparently a leak, he said, the hold was filling with water, and he had been bailing with a bucket all night. The cargo had shifted too, and the ship had tipped clear over until the water was on a level with my windows on the top deck.

"The crew was throwing the cargo overboard—all the stuff they could handle. It looked like bales of cloth and such stuff. Their derricks weren't working, so they couldn't get rid of the heavier things, like automobiles.

"A little crowd of men stood up there, leaning over the railing and watching the crew throw the stuff overboard, some of them had come out with their life preservers on. They looked badly scared. Some of us did what we could to cheer the more timid ones—told them this was just a precaution and so on."

S.O.S. Signal Kept Secret From Passengers

"Officers were going about, cheery but non-committal. They never told us anything. I never knew until after the Vestris keeled over that they had even sent out an S.O.S.

"The ship kept on tipping. It looked to me as though she had a list of 45 degrees. You could hardly walk on the deck.

"At 10:30, the women and children were brought up and were told to put on life preservers. Still we got no definite information from the officers or crew.

"The women were wonderful.

Some of them were crying quietly—but there was no hysteria. One of them held in her arms a baby not more than eight months old. All the children had been bundled up. They knew now that they would probably have to leave the ship.

"Isn't this fun?" I said to one little fellow with bright blue eyes, trying to cheer him up. He looked at his mother, who was crying, and nodded solemnly.

Lifeboats Launched From Higher Side

"At 11:30 they started to launch the lifeboats, over the port side—the side that was up as she listed. Then the trouble began. It took them two hours to launch those boats, an operation that usually takes about 10 minutes.

"The difficulty was that the lifeboats kept catching on the sides of the ship. The outsides of the lifeboats were covered with clapboards, like a frame house, and these would catch on the overlapping steel plates on the ship's hull.

"They tried to hold the lifeboats out—away from the ship—by pushing with oars. It was a slow and painful process.

"In boat No. 1, before I got in, were 10 women and two children—two youngsters about six or eight years old. One of the women was Clara Ball, with whom I subsequently floated on the piece of wreckage. Another was Mrs. Inoye, wife of the counselor of the Japanese embassy at Buenos Aires. The ship's bartender was aboard, and our crew consisted of four negro sailors.

Steamer Goes Down Three Minutes Later

"Three minutes after we pulled away, the Vestris keeled over on her side and sank.

"I think one of the funniest things I saw was 40 men—apparently all those left on board—racing madly down her side and diving off from her keel.

"Fear of Sharks Is Cause of Sudden Concern

"Toward sunset it began to close up. And then a thought flashed into my mind that made me feel little sick all over. Sharks.

"I don't know whether Miss Ball ever thought of them or not. If she did she kept it still about it.

"During that long night of waves and wind and rain we clung to the spar—talking intermittently. She told me that she was a stewardess.

"At daybreak came the worst moment of all for us. As the dawn broke—not a ship was in sight.

"Just a few minutes after we pulled away, our lifeboat began to fill with water. The tin patch tore away. She had air compartments, however, so that we could stay in her, even after she was under water.

Women Remain Calm In Crisis

"Still the women tried to keep calm, although the tears streamed down their cheeks. There was no screaming.

"One of the children started to whimper. His mother—hastily drying her eyes—tried to comfort him.

"It wasn't long before a big wave came along and capsized us. I got caught under the lifeboat as she turned over. I wasn't hurt, except for a little scrape on my neck. As I struggled out from under, I saw a woman's foot bob up. I grabbed it and hauled her with me. It was Miss Ball.

"The children disappeared, and the women—all except Miss Ball.

"I saw a piece of wood—wreckage floating in the water.

"Take hold of one end," I told her, "and I'll take the other." Slowly she did so—never a whimper.

ADAMS SPEEDY BALL CARRIER

Corvallis Halfback Pulls Albany Out of Fire With Long Run

When the Salem high school football team meets Corvallis high Friday afternoon, the red and black pigskin warriors will have to be on their toes against the wiles of one "Romy" Adams, Corvallis' halfback.

Several times this year this lad Adams has performed feats which saved his team from defeat, the last occasion being no longer ago than Monday, when with Albany leading 7 to 0 and only four minutes left to play, he grabbed an Albany punt and ran through the entire Albany team 48 yards for a touchdown. Adams also picked the goal. He made a number of other long runs in this game, putting his team in scoring position.

Avrit, Schythe, Dolly and Mc-

Williams are other Corvallis backfield men who have proven dangerous in earlier games this year.

In the game with Albany they made plenty of yardage, but bungle

and a stubborn goal line defense on the part of the visitors

prevented them from scoring earlier.

The Corvallis line is made up of:

M. Wagner and Anderson, ends;

D. Wagner and Brown, tackles;

Dixon, Batcheller and Rawle, guards, and Briggs, center. Dixon and Brown are the outstanding forwards.

One match was postponed.
