British Cousins

CIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, British foreign secretary, used his recent health-seeking tour in America to give utterance once again to Britain's friendship for the United States. Just before he sailed from Canada he ascertained that his country had no rivalry with the United States and no desire to enter upon a naval competition with them.

It is a commonplace to say that there is no country in the world with whom we have so much in common as with Great Britain and so little rational reason to suppose we could ever have conflicting interests serious enough to bring us into war. Yet it is also common knowledge that with no other nation have we ever been so often on the verge of war.

Britain so sharply challenged our right to annex Texas that there was danger of war. She rightly contested with us for the ownership of the Oregon country and there were tense times which raised ominous war clouds. Rival logging interests all brought war over the unsettled boundary between Maine and Canada. Our too active Irish sympathies and aid to the Canadian rebels in 1837 likewise placed us in the position of courting war. The Civil war relations edged war until after the struggle turned definitely toward emancipation of the slaves and northern victory was assured. And so through the years.

The American public and press have always been amazingly quick to take offense at England and to demand a course of action which if followed must lead to war. The British public have always heartily reciprocated such feelings. This strange attitude can best be understood when we remind ourselves that we are cousins with so much of pride and stubborness in common that it is easy to have family fights. But fortunately the quarrels are like most family kind, not going so far but that some level headed member can bring the hot headed ones back to at least surly reason. Contrary to popular belief the ones who have so brought the two peoples to their better senses have been the diplomats and governmental officials who have thrown their influence for peace while the people have demanded their own way even at the price of war. A wiser teaching of history in our schools, and less indulgence of story books about Redcoated villains will make the younger generations more sanely responsive to the leadership which points to the ways of friendship with our British cousins.

Woman Without a Country

WHEN Edward Everett Hale wrote "The Man Without a Country" the idea of woman suffrage was young. The world now has on its hands a woman without a country-

In the case of Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, cultured Hungarian Jewess, active internationally, one of those who unsuccessfully tried to help Henry Ford get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas.

She has several times applied for American citizenship, and each time she has been refused because her ideas of duty to the government do not coincide with what Uncle Sam expects from his adopted children. She says she has no sense of nationalism, only a cosmic consciousness of belonging to the human family. She is to be credited with the courage of her convictions. Many would bury their cosmic consciousness long enough to obtain citizenship, but her courage will, not obscure the fact that in the opinion of most thinking EARLY MARRIAGES AND FREE the passage way from which one men and women her sense of obligation is all wrong.

Making Haste Slowly

TF the boys and girls attending the public school of the Salem district had to learn an alphabet of even 1000 characters instead of their own 26, they would have something about which to complain-

But in China they think they are lucky because a new system of writing has been put into effect known as the "1000 character system" to take the place of the old system involving the learning of 40,000 symbols.

When one has learned these 1000 characters he can read newspapers and is given the degree of "literate" citizen. uncertainty and the moment they They are trying to teach the new alphabet to 100,000,000 at fall in love, they go off to the first, which they think will make a fair start toward over- registry ofice. Life is short, they coming illiteracy as a whole.

This is making haste slowly. China is very old and very conservative. In Turkey, they have adopted our alphabet of idea that marriage is only a lit-26 letters—

And China will get around to this in due course. The moving picture and the airplane and the typewriter and telephone and telegraph and the newspaper and all the rest will hurry along this process; the 100,000,000 "literate citizens" will help a lot. English will some day be the universal language, and all alphabets will be like ours. International trade is hastening this movement.

Smaller Currency

CMALLER but better currency is under preparation for release in next July, the United States treasury department having been at work for two years on the new bill size which is to replace millions of notes of larger size now in circulation.

There will be eleven denominations of the new money which will be six and five-sixteenths by two and eleven-sixteenth inches in size, in contrast to the present size of seven and one-half inches by three and one-fourth inches.

Convenience to the public and tremendous savings in the cost of producing paper money are reasons for the new size. Each of the eleven denominations will bear a portrait of a U. S. president, the dollar bill showing Washington, the two dollar bill Jefferson and the five-dollar bill Lincoln.
