GEORGE W. YORK, of Seattle, editor of "Bees and Honey." "To most people, honey is just honey. There are actually dozens of different varieties of honey, and the Oregon State Bee Keepers association has an opportunity to do a big piece of educational work in showing the public the differences between these varieties."

RALPH PIELOW, western representative of Metro-Goldwyn films, said: "You've got a mighty fine, live lown here. One can see plenty of contrast fn covering the territory between Denver and the coast."

M. D. VINYARD, local chiropodist, said: "There seems to be another outbreak of brutal murder stories in the news these days. I think it is possible for newspaper to play up that type of news too strongly. I like to see at least part of the news of a more wholesome nature. It is also likely to suggast further crimes to certain types of persons.'

MISS ANONA WELCH, who acts in the capacity of clerk for Salem justice court, said: "Why do you have to find out what other people think all the time? I should think you might have some ideas of your own once in a while."

DONALD McDONALD, new manager of the Oregon theatre. said: "We're going to make the Oregon 'stand on its own feet' more than ever before, by bringing in the best picture programs we can book from the biggest producers. Changes in the theatre itself and in the staff will be completed soon."

GEORGE A, BAUMAN, district general superintendent of the West Coast Telephone Co .. "You must see 'Rose Marie,' when it comes to Salem. Virginia Fox has all the 'It' there is-personality, vivacity and a world of talent. She helps to make 'Rose Marie' the a long time."

HAROLD MERO, men's furnishings salesman, said: "There is no sense in keeping stores in Salem open Saturday night because everybody who buys then could come in earlier. As long as the stores stay open people will put off coming in to buy until the last minute. Several of the stores here close at 6 o'clock and they don't do any less business for it. That's more like Oregon weather."

GRACE ALLEN, teacher at Yew Park school, said: "This fog is the cat's pajamas with a ilm over it.'

MRS, MAE YOUNG, secrery of the Associated Charities. 21 Court street, said: "There is a hard winter ahead, and already we are in need of clothing and groceries to meet the demands which come to us.
