Carrot Pack Heavy; Paulus Plant Has Demand for 8000 Cases More

The canning season in Salem is not over. The Paulus plant is still going on carrots. The pack of this vegetable is already 8000 cases, and there are orders ahead sufficient to double this pack, if the carrots can be had. It is not likely that there will be enough to make up that number. The demand for canned carrots is larger than was expected, owing to crop shortages in other canning sections.

The Starr cannery is still going night and day on applesthough there was a rest over Thanksgiving, beginning at 11 o'clock Wed. night. There is sufficient supply on hand and contracted for to make up 30,000 sases yet though hie pack already finished is unprecedentely large.

Apples are still being canned at the West Salem plant, for the Northwest cannery, and the operation there will go on for at least several days yet.

The Hunt cannery is through its apple run for the season is through canning till gooseberries come next spring.
