Monday Evening Music Pleases Audience

Salem is growing in musical attractions. Presented for the first time at the Schubert program at the Nelson hall Monday evening was a group of 35 youthful voices, all girls, who have christened themselves the Salem Lyric Singers. The name is very fitting, for that is just what their voices are—lively, lyrical, full of the freshness of youth. They sang their way into the hearts of the audience with keen delight, happy in the joy of musical expression. Their voices were especially good in the sustained tones of "Good-night, Beloved." Miss Lena Belle Tartar deserves much credit for the work only so recently begun with this group. The chorus was accompanied by Lois Plummer.

Miss Lucille Cummings, who took first place in the high school tournament this past spring again won her audience with her deep, delicately contralto voice. She sang with feeling, especially so in the "Lay of the Imprisoned Huntsman" where she swung from a haunting sweetness of tones to a lilting enthusiasm. Miss Cummings is a versatile young lady accompanying other musicians on the program as well as she sang.

Miss Jewell Gardner sang a group of Schubert songs with a smoothness of tone and clearness of enunciation which made listening a pleasure.

Arthur Boesch, a student of Miss Elma Weller, gave real enjoyment with his interpretation of "Marche Militaire" and Moment Musical Op. 94.

The American Legion Auxiliary Quartet gave the prize-winning number from the summer contest at Medford. The quartet accompanied by Mrs. Roberta Zinn, Miss Mildred Wyatt, Mrs. Bernice Bowe, Mrs. Marie Robertson and Mrs. Grace Zoell. Their voices are particularly well fitted for their quartet work.

Other pleasing numbers were given by Virginia Bright, Muriel Kelly, Barbara Barham and Lawrence Barber.

Such musicles as this go far toward building up a real appreciation of music on the part of the public.

Diet and Health

IF YOU ATTEND A "TEA" GO WITHOUT YOUR SUPPER

Teas and temptations are a SHORT time ago I attended a tea at Rhea's. Such an array of sandwiches made in all forms and shapes! Finger rolls with water cross, different layers of bread put together with all sorts of fillings—minced chicken, cream cheese, nuts, etc.—then pressed and sliced across so that they lay in layers; layers, roved with fillings, then cut across, so the sandwiches were circular, etc.; rich and juicy cakes, nuts, candy galore, and tea and coffee.

I have a few pounds yet to lose from my summer accumulation, so I am limiting my tea. I indulged in a few of the sandwiches and a cup of tea, and found, to my delight that I could resist the cakes, nuts and candy.

Faulty Address Responsible For Huge Cash Loss

Incorrect addresses are responsible for loss of not less than $350,000 cash to the public each year at Christmas time, according to word received at the Salem postoffice from the federal department, Arthur E. Gibbard, local assistant postmaster, said Tuesday.

The dead letter office receives each January, between three and four million dead letters containing Christmas and New Year's cards, in addition to the normal receipts of unidentified mails. Much of this loss could be prevented if the patrons of the service could be persuaded to place return addresses on the envelopes, it was pointed out. Many of the letters received at the dead letter office contain gifts of money, and even these the dead letter authorities can seldom return to the senders as most of them contain insufficient information for that purpose.
