

SISSON NEW C. OF C. HEAD

Dr. Kerr Urges Protective Tariff as Solution of Farm Problem

Election of B. E. Sisson, manager of the Miller Mercantile Co., as president of the Salem chamber of commerce was accomplished Monday as a feature of an interesting luncheon meeting at which Dr. William Jasper Kerr of Oregon State college, was the chief speaker.

New officers who will serve with Mr. Sisson are Fred D. Thielson, vice-president; Douglas M. Kay, secretary; William J. Liljequist, treasurer; Oliver J. Myers, social department; W. L. Phillips, civic department; W. T. Stoitz, agricultural department; Sam Chambers, legislative department; and Otto Hillman, industrial department.

Ted Roy, second prize winner in last year's nation-wide radio audition contest, sang "Hills of Home," and other numbers, preceding the address of the day by Dr. Kerr. Roy was accompanied by Paul Petr, head of the music department at O. S. C.

"We must reduce the quantity and value of imported farm products if we want to solve the agricultural problem of the United States," Dr. Kerr declared, after presenting figures that showed the surprising growth of the nation and of Oregon in all industries.

LAD FROM CUBA KAYOES SANGOR

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(AP)—A Cuban youth named Armand Santiago added to the list of pugilistic uprisings tonight when he scored a surprising knockout over Joey Sangor of Milwaukee, hitherto regarded as the leading contender for the world's junior lightweight title.

Sangor, matched to fight Tod Morgan for the 130-pound title in Milwaukee, next New Years afternoon, was knocked down twice by sharp right crosses to the chin.

The victory was a distinct surprise as Sangor, fighting for the first time in four months, accepted the match as a warm-up for his contest with Morgan. His defeat stunned the crowd of 10,000 spectators who jammed the coliseum to witness three ten round bouts, with Tommy Loughran, world's light-heavyweight champion, appearing as one of the headliners. The first round was fairly even and full of action. Sangor went to his opponent confidently, jarring him with short snappy punches, with the Cuban trading punch for punch.

Grant Pupils Put $45 Holiday Fund

Pupils of the Grant school cooperated with great success in the plan adopted last week of raising money by collecting old papers and selling them, with the result that $45 was received, Principal E. A. Miller reported Monday. Of this amount, $30 will be given to the Associated Charities for relief work, $10 to the Boys and Girls Aid society, and the balance will be kept in the student treasury.

C. C. BEDDING FIVE CINCHES 1ST HALF

By defeating the Elks two games out of three Monday night at the Winter Garden, the Capital City Bedding company bowling team cinched the first half championship in the City league. The season ends January 7, after which a new series will be started. The Reo Flying Clouds set a new team game record, 1013, Monday night and won from the Man's Shop two games out of three although one was decided by a single pin. O'Leary's Legionnaires defeated Scheel's Men's Wear two out of three.

COLLEGIATE STYLE SHOW BIG SUCCESS

Gown." And then the style show began with "Van" Bateson modeling lounging robes in a nice little domestic picture of "Do hurry, dear, we are late already," with Mary Clantfield in an exquisite shaded chiffon. After that they followed in quick succession: Marabel Quinn and Bob Risley, also in formal wear; two blond collegiates in informal wear; Evelyn High and Floyd Albin, followed by Mildred Pugh in afternoon dress; Camilla Gales and Jack Majowski in clever tennis togs appealed to the audience.

"Teddy" Power and Don Saunders in College Humor Collegiate wear received no mean hand, either; Josephine Conn, the "Greta Garbo girl" in a lovely gown came in on the arm of handsome Ralph Purvine, who was modeling from Cooley's; Lillian Scott and Willis Hathaway contrasted nicely in collegiate afternoon wear; Katherine Elgin and "Pat" Emmons arrived in golf wear; Buena and Howard Kurtz, the latter voted one of the best looking men on the campus, were dressed in formal afternoon wear; like a breath of frosty air, then came Norabel Pratt and Ray Miller just from St. Moritz; then more collegiates, Florian Hrubetz and Colias Marsters; Edith Morange in afternoon wear; Eleanor Henderson and William Smullen, very professional looking professionals in top coats that were top coats; Mildred Pugh and Harold Thomason wore the not too informal evening wear; Jean White and Ralph Schamp wore collegiate afternoon wear to no mean advantage; Jean Middleton and John Edwards were "top notch" in riding habits; Roby Laughlin voted one of the best dressed women on the campus, coming on the stage with "Swede" Payne, wore a formal costume dress in ruffled shell pink; Frances McGilvra, voted one of the most popular women; Dortha Peters, and Harriette Hageman modeled lounging robes and pajamas and Ivan B. White, who won considerable applause. Ray Felker directed the style show.—B. M. LOCKHART.

CHAPTER XXXVIII
THE next morning, the steady patter of rain against the windows, like furies' fingers, woke Byrd from a restless sleep. Her dark, velvety eyes fluttered open like butterflies spreading their wings.

She felt as if something dreadful was going to happen. The nightmares of the night still vaguely possessed her mind, leaving their grey shrouds hanging in the corridors of memory.

Then instantly she remembered. She had bought a house. And the terror and fear that had expressed itself in her subconscious mind all night long, gave way to the sauer feeling of happy anticipation and joy of possession. In spite of the gloom of the early morning, a keen sense of delight swept over her.

Hadn't she wanted a house ever since she'd been married? And what a perfect house it was! A tiny replica of it floated like an iridescent bubble through her mind.

Byrd glanced over at the other bed where Pat was still sleeping. Pat had just had her hair cut short so that now, with the dew of slumber curling it tightly, her head looked like a perfectly round curly-haired sun.

Byrd's golden hair dipped in wide waves at her temples and was braided demurely into two long ropes that hung down her back. It was strange that no one had really encouraged her to have it cut, and she never had the courage since she knew her father was so opposed to it. Everyone said it was her "type" and let it go at that. As long as she could remember she had worn it braided into a coronet around her head.

LET'S LIVE! MILDRED LAMB

READ THIS FIRST:
Byrd Browning, brought up in a small town, was trying to adapt herself to her fast-moving, magnetic, young husband, Larry, but she soon discovered that Jack Duncan, his business associate, was plunging him into debt instead of making him rich as he promised. Larry's friends were lively and spendthrift, and Larry, too, was spending his entire income, even the large sums he was continually borrowing from Mr. Hamilton, Byrd's father, on useless extravagance and on Jack Campbell, a former sweet heart of Larry's, who "borrowed" from everybody.

Pat, Byrd's young sister who lived with them in their small, expensive apartment, intoxicated with city life, started a party of her own. Finally Byrd bought a house without Larry's knowledge and paid $1,000 down on it, out of the last cent. Try and Fred Oberman admired her courage and approved the step she had taken.

her quickly to a sitting position. "Say, Dizzy-Izzy," said Byrd, laughing at the comical look that came into Pat's eyes in the first hazy realization of waking. "I've got an idea."

Pat reached up and touched Byrd's forehead, experimentally. "Aged in the wood?" she asked, yawning, so that her little pink tongue and small teeth, shining like lights from within, formed the better part of her face for a minute. Then she stretched over the bed and looked (Turn to Page 3, Please.)

IMPORTANT TO YOU

Realizing that the thousands of people who are compelled to work all day must find some time to do some Christmas shopping we have arranged to keep our store open on

SATURDAY NITE
Dec. 22nd.

This is in keeping with our policy of the last two months of Saturday night opening and is done primarily to accommodate our many friends who cannot get into the business district before 6 o'clock.

Keeping open Saturday night is an accommodation which we are glad to extend to our patrons, but in giving to some we must not make others suffer so we have arranged for a crew of extra sales-ladies to work during the week and will have most of our regular sales-ladies to serve you on Saturday.

This arrangement means that none of our girls will work over the regular eight hours a day or the forty-seven and three-quarters hours for the week.

If you are one of the thousands who find it necessary to work all day Saturday we hope that you will avail yourself of the Saturday night arrangement that we have made, and visit the store "where shopping is a pleasure," where it pays to "pay as you go" for "quality merchandise at popular prices."
