

The Day's News in Pictures

UNDER THE MISTLETOE is Miss Margaret Pantall, of Richmond, Va., posed with the symbol of holiday cheer. Apparently Miss Pantall wasn't aware of the presence of members of the opposite sex.

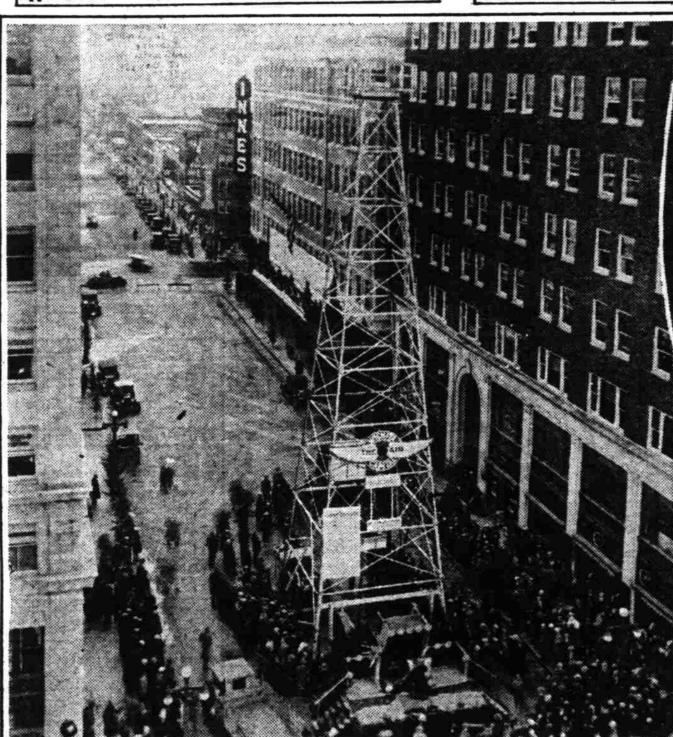

Frank Carella's home in Kansas City, Mo., is shown above. It marked the fifty-fifth explosion in the city within the year. Perhaps its owner won't mind so much for he's serving a term at Leavenworth for bootlegging. No one was in the house at the time, though several were injured when the house next door caught fire.

ALL THAT IS LEFT of

RECOGNIZE HIM, GIRLS? Well, "it's" none other than England's next king, the Prince of Wales, as he appeared at the age of one. The photo has never been published before.

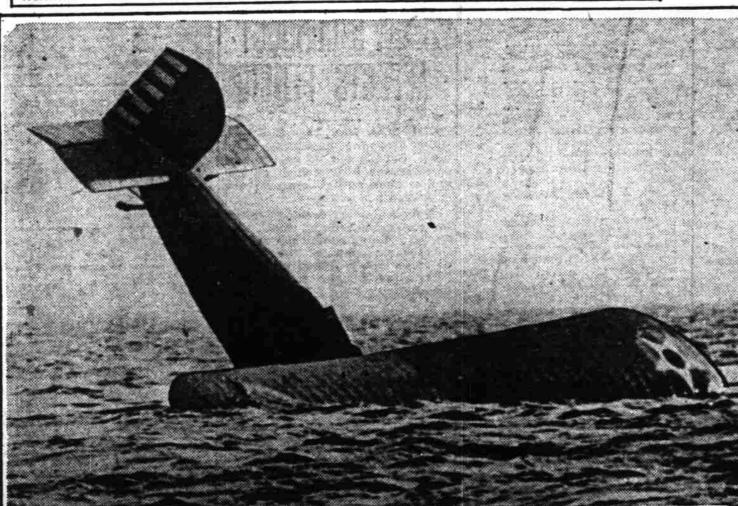

RIGHT IN THE MAIN STEM of Wichita, Kas., is this oil well derrick, erected there as part of the elaborate ceremonies in recognition of the recent discovery of the black gold in and about Wichita.

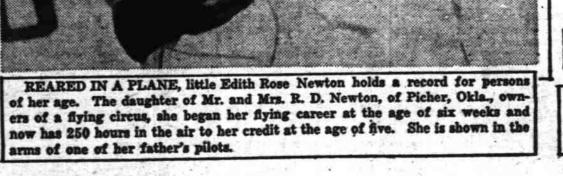

IN THE SPOTLIGHT of the capital, Virginia Peters was the cynosure of all eyes as the ballerina of the Junior League society circus at Washington. Virginia is one of the most delightful members of the younger set at the national capital.

A WOUNDED BIRD, in this case an army biplane, goes down into the sea after a nose dive into the waters off Winthrop, Mass. The pilot and a passenger were only slightly injured.
