ONIONS UP TO HIGHEST MARK

Little Change in Prices on Local Markets; Cabbage On Up Grade

Little change has occurred in the Salem markets this week aside from the customary fluctuations in the prices of grains, butter and butterfat and eggs. Onions are no wentering the seasonal high level, with the best grade up a dollar a hundred to $6 and the No. 2's now $5. Retail price is four pounds for 25 cents on the locals.

Cabbage from California is supplanting the local, but neither is of an extra good quality. The local is 5 cents a pound wholesale and California is a cent higher. Retail price on the California is also 5 cents in most instances. Prospects are for even higher prices.

Cauliflower, like cabbage, is not so good. The average size head retails for 20 cents.

Yams Arrive
Yams made their first appearance on the market here this week and sell at four pounds for 25 cents, as also do sweet potatoes. Sweet potatoes are quite scarce, with the quality fair, despite the scabby appearance.

Brussels sprouts are offered in greater quantities. For the most part the sprouts being of good quality. They are 20 cents a pound and two pounds for 35 cents.

Lettuce is good at 10 cents a head as a rule. A new variety of local turnips is offered, these resembling a radish in both shape and color. They are two pounds for 15 cents. Other turnips sell at the same price. Local beets and radishes in small quantities are selling at 5 cents a bunch.

Potatoes Steady
Bulk vegetables, including carrots, turnips and rutabagas, continue to be priced at six pounds for 19 cents. Bulk parsnips are five pounds for 29 cents.

A good quality spinach sells in the neighborhood of three pounds for 25 cents.

Celery, excellent grade, is two stalks for 25 cents.

The small varieties of squash continue to hang on, at five for 25 cents or thereabouts. Most of the larger squash offered now is

Low Grapefruit Prices Not to Last, Predicted

Grapefruit has been cheap this week, but the price will not remain at this level for long, grocers report. The Arizona crop is practically cleaned up, and selling at the lowest prices of the season.

A better grade of fruit is arriving from Florida to supplant the scabby grapefruit that has been offered for several weeks.

The old fruit is selling at two for 15 cents, and 5 cents apiece is the general price on the new, but slightly smaller, fruit.

Apples are selling cheaper at the present time, due to a clean-up in various grades preliminary to offering the Hood River crop almost exclusively. Some stored are offering a good variety at a few cents less than dollar a bushel. These previously sold at from $1.20 to $1.25. A good grade apple may be bought in smaller quantities at six pounds for 25 cents.

Bananas are down slightly wholesale, but storekeepers report they will hold the price the same for awhile at least to give them an opportunity to make a profit on banana sales. The usual price is three pounds for 25 cents, with an occasional sale at four pounds for 29 cents on the riper fruit.

The potato market remains steady.

Cranberries and grapes have practically disappeared from the stores, nor are they longer quoted by the wholesalers.

WILL DEMONSTRATE SALAD MAKING ART

A continuous demonstration of the art of making salads during which four expert salad makers of Portland will display their methods of salad making to Salem housewives has been planned for every day of the week of January 28 to February 2 in an anniversary celebration to be staged by the Roth Grocery Co. The occasion will mark the 29th year of that firm's business operations in Salem.

Beginning on Monday the salad makers will prepare in the Roth store scores of the most delicious and popular types of salads and every Salem woman and woman from the Sale mid-district will be invited to the store to see the salads made. Not only will common recipes be used, but special dishes from recipes of noted chefs throughout the United States will add an attractive feature to the week's school.

Wade, sales manager of the store, has been active for the past month in preparing the event. In making the preliminary announcement Thursday he made the fact plain that no charge would be made for the school nor would any contest be entered into which would require special effort on the part of Salem women. The event will be entirely an educational one with the Roth store seeking no gain except the goodwill of the hundreds and thousands of women expected to attend the school.

Details concerning the hours when salads will be made as well as the method of having special recipes prepared, will be announced next week by Mr. Wade.

Roth's started operations in Salem in 1899 and has been engaged in the retail grocery business since that time.
