Senator Jones of Washington, ex-author of the 1928 shipping set, told the conference that events of the past several months promised a new day for American shipping which was on firm ground for the first time in 75 years and that steps to further its growth must and will be taken.

The senator outlined the salient needs in American shipping develepment as provision for higher speed commerce—one of the immediate needs—aid to cargo shipping, placing of the Pacific is-lands in coastwise trade with the United States and fostering indirect trade.

There is discrimination by Canada and Australia to protect their interests on the Pacific coast, he asserted, and added there is "no reason why America should sit tamely by and submit," without thing measures to insure the same protection to her shippers.

termed as "distressing" the difficulties of American shippers to secure adequate terminal facilities in home ports, while foreign vessels get the "cream" of the facilities, and insisted the government should take steps to remedy this condition, if necessary, by acquiring leases on the facilities and assisting American shippers in the use of them

Representative Wood of Indiana predicted the Hoover administration would increase American trade with South America. He said that Americans formerly were "inpured to the idea of British and foreign supremacy" in merchant marine but they are now realizing the importance of America's ship-

Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown university and regent of the School of Foreign Commerce, declared that insidious and persitent propaganda had been circulated in educational circles asserting the impossibility of America's competing with other nations in the merchant marine. Foruseth, who was not on the program, told the conference that American shipping cannot compete with foreign trade as long as certain existing conditions obtain.

Referring specifically to the shipping board's ruling that a vessel, in order fly the American flag and be classed as an American vessel, must be built in American yards, he asserted that the United States is the only nation which has established such a "monopoly."

COMMISSION EYES | Campaign Methods

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.(AP) -The federal trade commission's power utilities investigation today touched on the 1926 primary campaign or Thorne Brown for reelection to the Nebraska railway commission with Horace M. Davis of Lincoln, former association, testifying as to what he knew of the stand taken toward Brown's candidacy by state utilities inter-

Asked whether he wind been told by any utility man or contributions being made by the power companies for Brown's campaign, Davis said he had heard so but immediately expressed the opinion that he had not answered the question and said that no such information had been given him by anyone within the indus-Later he testified that he learned of conferences attended by utility men at which contributions to Browne's campaign had been discussed. He declined to name his informant until ordered to do so by Commissioner McCulloch, presiding. When he named Frank E. Helvey, who he said was secretary for the Insurance Federation of Nebraska at Lincoln. He said Helvey was not a utility man. At Omaha, Helvey asserted t-day that Davis had him "mixed up with some one else" and that he had "never told himanything about it and never knew anything about it." James E. Davidson. president of the Nebraska Power company, said he did not know whether the utilities had helped
