

Salem High Beaten On Own Floor Second Time In 4 Years

MEDFORD WINS; SCORE 20 TO 11

Visitors Speedy But Held Even in Second Half by Red and Black

For the second time in the experience of the present high school generation, a Salem high basketball team was defeated on its own floor Monday when the speedy Medford high quintet set the red and black down with the short end of a 20 to 11 score.

In the first half Medford set a fast pace and with the smiling Melvin on the scoring end of most of its rushes, ran up a lead of 15 6 at half time. Salem made only one field goal, Kelly getting that one.

The local team missed some shots, but it didn't get many opportunities for once running up against a defense which formed just a little faster than the attack could get under way.

The second half was ragged. Melvin sank one long shot and Thomas added another basket for Medford in the third quarter. Just as the quarter ended Gottfried poked in Salem's second field basket, the only one the locals made in the half.

Use "Delayed Offense" Throughout the last quarter Medford used its famous "delayed offense," a system which has acquired that name recently in lieu of the less polite word "stalling."

The net result was that Salem scored two points on free throws and Medford got none. The game was over just as the Salem players were showing promise of breaking up the system. Each team had scored five points in the second half.

Incidentally, Medford's "delayed offense" was the game that beat Salem high in last year's state tournament. Medford's defense that Medford employed with disastrous results against Washington high of Portland.

"Old Grads" of Salem high recalled that the local team has been beaten on its own floor just twice in five years; last year by Washington high of Portland, and in 1925 by Franklin high.

How to Become Famous

Roy RIEGELS

CALIFORNIA CENTER WHO PICKED UP A 'LOOSE' BALL AND RACED 75 YARDS IN THE WRONG DIRECTION IN THE GAME AGAINST GEORGIA TECH ON NEW YEAR'S DAY.

WHO'LL EVER FORGET

Long Count BARRY

By QUIN HALL. THE fellows who have pulled famous "boners" in sporting events often are severely criticized, but they have the distinction of being remembered long after many heroes in the same sports have been forgotten.

During the game between Georgia Tech and California at Pasadena on New Year's Day, one of the weirdest plays ever seen on a gridiron was uncorked. After the teams had been battling for some time with neither scoring, Roy Riegels, the California center, grabbed hold of a loose ball and ran well over half the length of the field toward his own goal line.

Long, one of the California backs, chased madly after him and stopped him only a yard or two from his own final chalk mark. The West-erners tried to kick out of danger, but the boot was blocked and a safety was scored by the Georgia-ns. That safety proved to be the margin of victory for the Southerners, as both teams succeeded in registering touchdowns following the play, with the California-kicking goal afterward while the Yellowjackets failed to make the extra point.

Riegels was unjustly criticized in some quarters. The only explanation is that he became con-used and ran in the wrong direction. He was yanked out of the line-up following the safety, but returned to the game later and played brilliantly. At first it was hinted that he had been hurt just prior to the run and that he was groggy. Riegels—and it must be admitted that he showed great sportsmanship in not seeking alibis—denied this and merely stated that he was balled up on the play. The statement has been advanced—and it is logical—that a lineman like Riegels would be much more apt to become confused under the circumstances than a backfield man whose business it is to carry the ball.

Probably no one felt more more badly over the whole thing than Riegels himself. Coach Nibs Price did right in putting the youngster back into the game after it was found that he hadn't been knocked cuckoo. It proved to everyone that Riegels was not being ostracized as a result of the blunder, and it helped to restore his self-confidence to be allowed to go on and fight to atone for the mistake. But he'll be remembered in football circles for a long time to come. If memory serves rightly, the same thing happened in a pro game in Chicago some three years ago, but the instances are few and far between on the gridiron.

"Long Count" Barry, the fellow who officiated in the last Tunney-Dempsey meeting in Chicago, is another example of how to become famous. While Barry's actions that night may have been officially legal, the fans—or many of them—will always chalk it down against Barry as what might be termed a "boner."

Many boners have been pulled in baseball. On numerous occasions base runners have been known to pass other base runners on the paths. This has been made possible through the fact that a runner will often put his head down low to gain speed and fail to notice that a runner in front of him has been overtaken. No boner in the national pastime, however, ever will probably get the wide publicity and become quite so famous as Merkle's failure to touch second base. That has stood long after the heroes of that particular game have been forgotten and it will be handed down from generation to generation.

So the fellows who pull "boners" have one satisfaction, and that is that their names will be down in history. Their misplays are never made intentionally and their errors can always be traced to a frenzied excitement to win at any cost.

And boners committed through such desires shouldn't be criticized so roundly and the players should never be condemned. Let's give Riegels a little cheer, knowing that he did what he thought was right.

JACK FAILS TO BEGIN TRAINING

Dempsey Unable to Start Road Work Due to Pressure of Business

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Business prevented Jack Dempsey from entering upon his training program today.

The former-heavyweight champion, who stepped into the job of promoting the Sharkey-Stribling fight after the death of Tex Rickard, had laid his plans to start road work today with the implications that he might return to the ring in the Palm Beach work outs that his body was in condition.

At noon today, however, he was forced to abandon the plan until tomorrow at least, because of a business conference at Palm Beach. Dempsey and other officials of Madison Square Garden corporation went to Palm Beach to discuss ticket reservations for the fight, but returned tonight.

Dempsey was informed today that "Pa" Stribling had written to a friend here that his son will come by train to Palm Beach on Tuesday but that he will meet his plane there and fly here Wednesday.

SHIPS COLLIDE DUE TO VERY HEAVY FOG

LONDON, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Dense fog today caused three serious ship collisions in the waters around England. The Dutch steamer Merauke, Batavia for Liverpool, was beached between Hythe and Sandgate to prevent sinking after collision in the Channel with an unidentified steamer eight miles east of Dungeness. The crew remained on board and groped to patch the vessel sufficiently to permit a tow to Dover tomorrow.

The Greek steamer Neion, Buenos Aires for London, put in to Dover badly damaged after colliding with the British freighter Ravelston. The Ravelston radiocast that she would be able to make port.

The British motor vessel Palacio took aboard the crew of the British tanker Inverurie although herself much damaged and, with the fore peak full of water. They collided off the mouth of the Mersey at Liverpool.

HITCHCOCK SUPREME IN U. S. POLO

Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., upper left, captain of the United States international polo team, is the only North American star worthy of a 10-goal handicap, according to handicap announcements of the United States Polo association. Hitchcock, who was also a 10-goal man in 1928, displaces the veteran Devereux Milburn, former international captain, shown on his horse, who has been dropped from 10 to six goals. Malcolm Stevenson, who was also at 10 goals, has been dropped to eight. Lewis Lacey, star back of the Argentine team, shares with Hitchcock honors as being the only other 10-goal star in the world.

Fight Racket Literature Enriched by 2 Opponents

MACON, Ga., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Young Stribling and Jack Sharkey have flunked out of Gene Tunney's school of fistic culture, but have enriched the literature of fight ballyhoo with two telegrams. When Sharkey met K. O. Christner last week he got this from Stribling: "Doesn't that big bum hit you on the chin. Let it for me at Miami."

While Stribling was on the receiving end of a noisy sendoff by the home folks tonight, this answer came from Jack: "Received your telegram. I am receiving $100,000 to sock you on the chin at Miami but I would be pleased to do it for nothing."

"No, there'll be no answer until Feb. 27," was Stribling's comment.
