PEAS AND BEANS REVEAL SPRING

Messengers Come From South to Sell at 18c and 25c; Rhubarb Here

The vegetable world has a way of its own in saying spring is en route. Just as the clothing world with its persistent displays of lighter coats and still lighter frocks. The vegetable spring-messenger comes from California. In the form of fresh green peas and green beans, which have added their bulk and plea to the grocery windows. And, by the way, those same windows that have looked almost lifeless and uninviting the past few weeks are beginning to pep up a bit.

These green beans and peas are selling at 18 cents and 18 cents a pound, respectively.

Rhubarb 12 1/2 and 15c
The first local rhubarb, only a small amount, was received at one of the wholesale houses Thursday. Other rhubarb has been available from both Sumner, Wash., and from California, but none of the imports has quite the color and appetizing appearance of that grown here. Retail price runs from 12 1/2 to 15 cents a pound.

Spinach supplies are plentiful, with the quality excellent. Price ranges from 10 cents a pound to three for 25 cents and as high as three for 35 cents. Cabbage, celery and lettuce have held a fairly firm tone during the week.

Potatoes Up 5c
Potatoes are higher, another reflection of the cold weather, with a raise of 5 cents on the 50-pound sack and proportionately on the hundred. Yams and sweets remain the same.

Cauliflower is plentiful at eight cents a head, or ranging from 10 to 15 cents for the smaller heads. Root and bunch vegetables have been steady this week, as have apples and grapefruit.

Farm Crops Not Harmed by Cold Avers Crawford

Little or no damage to farm crops has been occasioned by the cold weather of the last fortnight according to Henry Crawford of the Ladd & Bush bank who makes

Wheat Price Up Four Cents On Local Market; Damage By Frost Given As Reason

A four-cent raise in wheat prices in prospect, has occurred on the Salem market and is a reflection of price conditions over the country. Although the market follows the Chicago quotations and eastern condition, milling concerns are already hearing predictions from local farmers that the cold weather will necessitate reseeded of the wheat numerous contacts with farmers in the valley.

Fruit trees have escaped frost damage and except on south slopes where thawing has raised roots of grain, no damage has been done winter wheat. Loganberry growers are uncertain about the effect of the cold on their vines but they are hopeful that no harm will result from the cold spell.

fields. Other valley farmers say the seed in the ground is alright, a matter which will be settled one way or the other shortly.

The necessity to reseed in large areas is responsible for the sharp decline in prices, as reseeded will take much of the surplus wheat now held, thus forcing the market high way into March and April.

Corn Price Stronger
The new corn crop is coming in from the east, which should mean that corn prices decline. Instead, corn is showing a tendency to stronger prices. High moisture content and the fact that much of the corn may have to be dried before it is shipped to the coast are accountable for the up-trend.

Oats are becoming scarce, wholesalers looking for a sharp advance in prices. Weather conditions again are responsible for this, as large quantities of white wheat will be needed for March sowings if the cold weather and freeze have materially damaged the crop outlook.

A FEBRUARY GARDEN

February is an especially satisfying period for the amateur gardener. It is the season when he begins to plan for the next summer's plot in the backyard. A half dozen catalogs, a comfortable chair, a warm room and a credulous imagination constitute the equipment needed for growing a splendid garden—in winter.

The results of one's efforts are much more nearly perfect now than will be possible next summer. One needs merely to look at the vegetables, fruits and flowers portrayed in the catalogs and let fancy have free play. The advantages now over endeavors later lies in that one does not have to spade

If you don't care to take the time to make the salad like its name—tulips—it will taste just as well without the trimmings. This menu will serve four or five.

refractory soil, does not have to contend with frost's effect on tender plants; there are no blights on gardens in imagination, floods do bugs do not consume nor do the forays of neighbors chickens exasperate. It is the only perfect season for a garden.—La Grande Observer.

Today's Recipes
Salmon au Gratin—Open a large can of salmon; drain, remove skin, bone and flake it. Make a cream sauce of a tablespoon each of butter and flour cooked for two minutes. Then a cup of rich milk is added. When smooth add the juice of a lemon, pepper, salt, a half teaspoon of sugar and the fish. Put a layer in a shallow buttered baking dish, dust with fine crumbs, dot with butter, then put on another layer and repeat until the dish is full, having crumbs on top. Dot with butter, dust with a little grated cheese and bake twenty minutes in a medium oven. Should the dish seem a little dry add a few spoons of milk.

Tulip Salad—Scop out the centers of cooked beets and cut the edges like tulips. Fill with chopped celery and egg and the preferred dressing.

Suggestions
Avoid Monotony in Lamps
Variety in lamps is just as important as variety in chairs in creating an interesting and harmonious room. When there are a number of lamps in one room they should differ not only in design and size but in composition as well.

If one table lamp in the living room is a porcelain jar, another with a colored glass bowl as a base will offer a pleasing note of contrast. An occasional lamp made of a quaint bottle or of soft-toned pottery will lend additional variety and charm. Wood, too, is being used now to fashion unusual and decorative lamp bases.

Even in metal floor lamps one can still avoid monotony of material. If one bridge lamp is of wrought iron the second might well be of pewter, or of iron trimmed with antique brass, or of tole (painted tin), the choice of composition, as of type, depending upon the lamp's place in the room ensemble.
