

Oregon State Rooks Defeat Salem High Quintet 31 to 12

ORANGE SQUAD REVEALS SPEED

Players Handle Basketball Like Baseball and Shooting is Accurate

A strapping big crew of lads who handled a basketball as though it were a baseball, representing the Oregon State college "rook" class, descended upon the fair of the Salem high quintet Wednesday night and mopped up to the tune of 31 to 12.

These boys fired the ball at each other in dazzling fashion and handled it at top speed; and when they got anywhere in scoring distance they looped it through the basket with almost unbelievable accuracy.

When the Salem team got possession of the ball, these same orange shirted men checked so closely and so fiercely that the lighter local boys were unable to break in close to the basket, and for once their offense, which appears lightning fast against other high school teams, looked positively slow.

A lack of deepthoughtness, not noticeable in Salem high's other games here, showed up in the players' unsuccessful efforts to maneuver for shooting clearance. But they fought hard, and their effective defense was demonstrated when they held the fast collegians to so low a score.

Late Rally Staged
The Salem team showed to the best advantage shortly after the second half opened, when it gained back part of the 12 to 5 lead which the Rooks held at half time. But after this spur, the Rooks "got hot" on crisp shots and ran their score up to a safe lead.

This was Salem high's last game on the home floor, except for possible challenges. Coach Louis Anderson's boys will go to Eugene this week-end for a return game with Eugene high.

TROUBLE LOOMS OVER OLD GAME

Salem High School Demands Hearing on Action of McMinnville to Collect $30

Salem high school has demanded a hearing before the board of control of the state high school athletic association as a result of notice from Roy A. Cannon, secretary of the association, that the local school shall send its first team to McMinnville for a game with that high school or forfeit $30 for a breach of contract. Principal J. C. Nelson, following a conference with Coach Louis Anderson, informed Cannon by letter Wednesday that Salem felt a hearing was in order.

The present action grew out of a game with McMinnville at that city, February 8, when Salem's second team represented this school. The Monday following the game, Principal William J. Maxwell and Coach G. L. Allison of McMinnville paid Nelson a call to protest the local's action in sending the second team. Mr. Nelson immediately told them he agreed Salem had been at fault in not notifying McMinnville that the Salem second team was being sent over and offered to arrange another game at McMinnville's convenience between the first teams of each school.

The offer for another game and attempts to explain the situation to the McMinnville student body were ignored when Barney Cameron, Salem student body president, and Joe Cameron, athletic manager, appear in McMinnville for that purpose the day following the visit to this city.

Nelson States Position
So the matter rested until Cannon wrote Principal Nelson for Salem's version of the affair, to which Nelson replied, stating in part that failure to inform the Yamhill school that it was sending the second team was a grievous error on the part of Salem, and that Salem had made a proposition for another game, Mr. Nelson pointed out, however, that since McMinnville was expecting the first team up to the evening of the game there had been no financial loss and that Salem had easily defeated McMinnville in a previous game.

The contract only stipulates two games "between the teams of these schools." Mr. Nelson points out, and inasmuch as Salem made overtures for a third game, officials here believe the McMinnville case is akin to some of the pretty breach of promise cases that find their way to the front pages, with the school suffering not so much from a broken heart as a desire to collect on the $30 forfeiture.

In his letter demanding a hearing, Nelson says: "We have offered them an opportunity to make more money with another game, but they have refused to consider it, and I shall not repeat the offer as long as you try to attach a penalty to it." The principal holds that Cannon has violated article four, section five of the athletic association constitution providing that the board shall give the accused school due notice of the time and place of the hearing and an opportunity to be heard in its own defense before it shall have been judged guilty of breaking a contract.

Cannon has no right to impose such action as he has taken without a hearing, Nelson believes, and is ready for a show-down.

New Rule on Fumble Will Aid Grid Game, Coaches Opine; Heroes Dethroned

The new rule on fumbling in football, whereby a defensive player is prevented from running with the ball after recovering a fumble, will permit the offense to take more chances in handling the ball than before, and that will have a tendency to open up the game even more than at present and make it more spectacular. Such is the verdict of both Coach "Spec" Keene of Willamette and Coach Louis Anderson of Salem high.

"It will result in more trick and open plays," said Anderson, and since that type of play is the one that he has used consistently here, he believes it will be a favorable change for his teams. While agreeing that in general the new rule will open up the game and make it more spectacular, Coach Keene pointed out that by eliminating the run for touchdown after a defensive player recovers a fumble, another feature of the game which has made for uncertainty and thrills will be lost. "If this rule had been in effect 15 years ago, Brazier Small never would have been a hero," Coach Keene pointed out, referring to the time when the present justice of the peace, playing halfback for Willamette, scooped up a loose ball and galloped for a touchdown that presented the local school with a victory over the University of Oregon.

"Go back into football history and apply this rule to all the games that have been played, and a lot of games would be awarded to the teams that lost them, and a lot of championships would be upset," Keene said.

"But after all those thrilling runs have been few, while the new rule will give the offensive team more confidence on every play, knowing that a fumble will not be so costly, and the total effect will be a gain rather than a loss from the spectators' standpoint.

BOTH FIGHTERS LIKE MAGNOLIA

Everybody Apparently Satisfied With Selection of New York Man

By EDWARD J. NEIL, Associated Press Sports Writer MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 20. (AP)—The business activities of Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling, two prominent young heavyweights, regained a place in the sun today, with the smoothing away of the problem of selecting a referee for their engagement here one week from tonight.

The furrowed brow of sun-blackened Jack Dempsey, making a troubled debut as a sports promoter, was clearing rapidly as he left for Palm Beach tonight to take part with Babe Ruth in a charity performance. The former champion carried a telegram in his pocket from James A. Farley, chairman of the New York State Athletic commission, granting rugged Lou Magnolia the right to act as referee when the Boston tar and the Georgian square off in Glamigou park.

Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey and Pa Stribling, father of the southern ace, met with Dempsey today and adopted the New York commission rules in general as the governing code. This was necessary since Florida has no boxing commission and no flistic code of its own. Some changes may be made at another meeting Monday when the question of judges will be decided.

Leslie school held a patriotic program last Thursday in keeping with Oregon's "birthday."

RURAL SCHOOLS ARE BUSY, FOX REPORTS

At the two former schools work is progressing most satisfactorily, he saws. At Central Howell, the boys are building a backdrop in preparation for the baseball season.

The fifth and seventh grades of the Parkersville school is gathering materials to make a product map of Oregon as a geography project. A particularly interesting poster project and contest has just been completed by the North Howell school. Mr. Fox reports. The project basis was Samuel L. Simpson's "Beautiful Willamette," around which theme some artistic posters were made. Johnnie Coomer won first reward in the contest.
