

KIDDIES HUNT EASTER EGGS

Lions Club Event is Received With Much Approval by Large Crowds

Customs are nice things. They are like the old pair of bedroom slippers into which we slide tired feet after a hard day's work. They make us feel at home. There is the April fool custom which makes it perfectly permissible to tell a lie that would be ruinous on any day but April 1, and when the joke is found out you can laugh about it just as well if you are a stranger in a strange land as if you are the oldest citizen. It is the spirit of the thing—you are at home in it. You were brought up to laugh at April Fool jokes, everybody is and a joke and a laugh is the same in Oregon as it is in Indiana.

So it is with Easter customs. Easter bunnies, and rabbits and chickens speak the language of childhood and we were all children once, but all of us enough to feel at home over the custom of Easter. They fit us like our old bedroom slippers. We are at home with the whole populace in celebrating these customs.

Lions Club Event
Becomes Institution

Now the Lions club of Salem realized something of all this and last year they started an Easter egg hunt for kiddies under 12 years of age.

This year 6000 bright colored candy Easter eggs were rolled into neat green packages by Camp Fire girls, and these same 6000 eggs were hidden by the Camp Fire girls and the Boy Scouts out in the flower beds of the grounds during flower season. Sunday some 8000 persons out of which it is estimated 2,500 of them were children gathered to hunt those hidden eggs.

High School Band
Feature of Program

The high school band played and the Camp Fire girls and Boy Scouts patrolled the ranks to keep back the anxious hunters of Easter eggs. When the band had moved to the center of the field the hunt was to be on. The band started to move and some one inadvertently blew a whistle and the hunt was on anyway five minutes ahead of time.

Like a swarm of bees the youngsters covered the ground and in 15 minutes the hidden eggs were brought to light and those finding lucky numbers in their packages took the shells all away to take it down on the street next day and match it with a similar number in some kindly merchant's window. With the number matched a prize would be forthcoming.

There were some eggs reserved for the babies under two years of age, as Mr. Hurdine said (he is the kindly faced man who had charge of this big Easter event) "the little tots just naturally would get run over out there with all the excited older ones."

Next year there will be more eggs—perhaps 10,000 for the custom, for advertising is attracting more and more attention. It is becoming a custom which is honey and comfortable, and which the people like for the very reason that it draws them all together in a common interest, an interest which fits them all even as the old slippers by the fire.

The Lions should be happy in the knowledge that they have sponsored such a bond of common interest for Salem's children and grown up alike. —MERE CUBB.

CITIES TO DEMAND FAIRER RAIL RATES

The haul from San Francisco or south from Portland is far shorter than the port-to-port haul.

New Rates Would Bring More Volume, Claim

It has been Ellis' contention in representing the cities which include Eugene, Medford, Salem, Cottage Grove and a number of others, that in no instance should the rate from port to an intermediate city exceed the port-to-port rate. Lowering of existing rates from ports to intermediate cities would so greatly increase traffic from the latter points, Ellis contends, that the loss in rate would be more than compensated by the increase in volume of traffic.

Ellis held out his argument before the examiner for the interstate commerce commission that the present rate structure tended uniformly to concentrate all manufacturing at ports and to hamper greatly the growth of interior cities.

The Southern Pacific on the other hand, has asked for a higher tariff to interior points, seeking to have the interstate commerce commission set aside the fourth section of the interstate commerce act which provides that port-to-port rates shall exceed the port-to-interior rates.

Ellis contends in his brief that in some instances rates to interior points are more than 500 per cent higher than to the ports using a ton-mile basis for comparison. He sets out that some commodities hauled, for example from San Francisco to Medford, command three times as high a rate for half the distance as the same commodities sent from San Francisco to Portland.

abroad but there are less poorly filled shells, Bentley said, and there is an absence of core rot which seriously affects foreign imports.

Advertising Found Of Great Value

Bentley said he never realized the tremendous pulling power of advertising until he found out the strong demand which existed in the east for California grown walnuts which had been nationally advertised under a branded label.

"California is getting a high price because she is advertising her products," Bentley said. "While it seems difficult for us to advertise because of the smaller production, we could use advertising effectively in a smaller area where we confined our sales."

Bentley said an investigation of a machine to brand walnuts was planned after the ones employed in California, was being considered by Oregon growers.

Several out-of-town guests were present at the chamber to hear Bentley's address. In the group were Robert Wilson and E. S. Goff, the latter bringing greetings from Newberg, his home; Kenneth C. Miller of Portland, and William St. George and Andrew Bewley, both of Sheridan.

FRANCE HONORS DELOVED YANK

Ambassador Herrick's Loss Mourned Like That of One of Own Sons

Poincare will pay tribute to Mr. Herrick's memory in the name of the French government.

Immediately afterward, the cortege will form at the embassy and proceed to the American pro-cathedral in the avenue George V with detachments of French troops rendering honors.

Special Guard To Accompany Body

The body of the ambassador will be probably be transported at once to Brest or Cherbourg, where it is to be placed aboard the French liner. The cruiser will hold anchor and sail at once for New York. A special guard of honor will be designated by the government to accompany the body to its last resting place.

Although there has been no lying in state, a great number of people have passed along the avenue in front of the embassy to pay their respects in the only way they can, while others stop at the lodge to sign the register. This register now contains the names of all the members of the government, the whole of the diplomatic corps and a vast number of French people and members of the American colony.

HOOPER HAS JOB SELECTING AMBASSADOR'S SUCCESSORS

WASHINGTON, Apr. 1. (AP)—The death of Myron T. Herrick, veteran American ambassador at Paris, has placed before President Hoover the task of selecting his successor for appointment in the United States diplomatic corps.

Although the Hoover administration has been in power almost a month, no realignment of the diplomatic service has been attempted because of the time required for Henry L. Stimson, the secretary of state, to return to Washington from Manila, where he was serving as governor general of the Philippines.

During the interim the appointments of the Coolidge regime have remained in office and the vacancies caused unexpectedly at Paris has added to the problem of realignments. Mr. Herrick had been slated to remain in that post at least temporarily.

Many Names Are Already in Line

While it probably will be some time before a successor to Mr. Herrick is named, a number of names have been mentioned in unofficial circles here for that office, regarded as one of the most important in the American foreign service.

Among those who are being discussed is Hugh S. Gibson of California, now ambassador to Belgium, and a close personal friend of President Hoover. Mr. Gibson, who has been in the American foreign service more than 20 years, is one of the foremost of the diplomatic corps men and has had a wide experience in European affairs in general.

Ambassador At Rome May Be Transferred

Another is Henry P. Fletcher, ambassador at Rome, who accompanied President Hoover on his South American good will tour as a special representative of the state department. It is known that he made a deep impression upon the president during that trip.

The suggestion has been made that former Secretary Kellogg might consent to become ambassador at Paris, to which city he is now en route for a vacation, should the president request him to act until a decision has been made upon a permanent appointment. Former Vice President Charles G. Dawes, who has been mentioned for the post at London, now has been suggested for the French assignment. Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis, secretary of war under Coolidge, likewise has been mentioned as being former Governor Alvin T. Fuller of Massachusetts and John W. Garrett of Baltimore.

JAPAN REPLIES ON TARIFF QUESTIONS

iff duties on Japanese raw silk and tea.

The Tokyo embassy has been instructed to express the hope of the United States government that American lumber products would not be placed on an unfavorable basis with competing countries.

Japan's reply was that she was justified in including Kedar, a Siberian soft pine wood, in the duty free class, and pointed out that American lumber of the same special grade is admitted under the new tariff on the same footing.

The reply said that more than half of the Kedar imports are employed for non-competitive purposes and that production is small and can not be increased.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Japanese government because lumber interests on the Pacific coast complained of discriminations in new tariff rates recently passed by the diet but not yet formally placed into effect. There are some increases in the tariff duties on certain classes of lumber but they apply equally to products of all countries.

Senators McNary and Steiwer, of Oregon, who are interested in the question, have been informed by the state department of the Japanese reply.

BATTLE RAGES MOST OF DAY

Government Forces Reported Making Slight Advance Against Rebels

for proportions was impending on the Pacific coast where General Lazaro Cardenas' column of 8,000 federalists was drawing close to the town of La Cruz about 64 miles north of Mazatlan. It was estimated that about 4,000 insurgents under Generals Ramon F. Iturbe and Roberto Cruz had concentrated there and were prepared to make a stand. The federal advance guard came in contact with enemy outposts at several points today and drove them back after brief skirmishes.

Secretary of war Plutarco Elias Calles, from his headquarters at Bermejillo 100 miles southeast of Jimenez, reported to the Chapultepec castle that the struggle for possession of Jimenez was proceeding along a two mile front with cavalry, infantry, artillery and air forces engaged.

Rebels Occupy Strong Positions

The federals had found the insurgents strongly entrenched about a mile south of Jimenez, their lines describing a semicircle around the southern approaches of the city. Federal artillery was flung into place and began a bombardment of the enemy trenches at one o'clock this morning. The infantry and cavalry got into action soon afterward but, despite constant fighting, the federals had made a noteworthy advance at only one point up to noon.

That was on the right flank of the enemy, which at one place was pushed back into the city itself where street fighting followed.

Judging from the report of General Calles, however, a small body of troops succeeded in skirting the rebel position and destroyed several railroad bridges to the north of the road to Chihuahua city, cutting off means of retreat of the insurgents.

Rebel Ranks Are Declared Demoralized

No mention of casualties was made by General Calles, but he claimed that a rebel captain and 33 men had surrendered, the captured captain was quoted as saying that the rebel ranks were demoralized.

The insurgents were believed to be under the personal command of General Francisco Urralejo and General Jose Gonzalo Escobar, the rebel commander-in-chief. They have several airplanes one of which bombed the federal lines during the morning but was forced by federal aviators to return to rebel territory.

The tone of the report of the secretary of war was decidedly optimistic. He several times assured the president that the federals would win and even expressed the belief that General Amazan would buffet up the rebels so that their defeat would mean the surrender of annihilation of the entire insurgent army.

Captain Robert Fierro, who achieved fame by his flights to Havana and Central America last year, returned to the federal lines on foot after abandoning his plane, which was forced down in rebel territory yesterday by a motor trouble.

The hearing lasted until well after midnight and not until tomorrow will the transcript of Mrs. Kennedy's testimony be made public. Hornblower and Little said they would leave for California tomorrow.

Woman Won't Admit Reporters

Although Hornblower and Little were agreeable to allowing newspaper reporters to attend the hearing, Mrs. Kennedy refused.

"I must think and to think I must have quiet, day reporters can't stay," she declared. "I must concentrate on every question to help our dear friend Judge Hardy. Truth, honor and justice must be preserved."

Turning to a man on her right who had not been taking notes, Mrs. Kennedy asked:

"What paper do you represent?"

"I'm Little from California," Little replied.

"Well, ain't that the limit," Mrs. Kennedy said and sat down. Enthusiasm Frenzied

Woman at Inquiry

Little told newspapermen he was anxious to "get down to business," arguing his statement with "we're not going to spare that woman anything. It will be the same for her as it will be for you." Previous to the hearing Mrs. Kennedy said she had been trying to get in touch with Judge Hardy by telephone. She failed.

He made a brief statement to reporters that he was not guilty of the charges, and would go to Jacksonville to prove his innocence. He said he expected to be arraigned in May and declared he would issue a formal statement that would "explain everything."

Asked where he had been last week when deputy marshals were searching for him to notify him of the warrant, the congressman indicated he had been in Washington. He was not accompanied by an attorney but indicated he would have one.

A deputy marshal who accompanied him from the building said the congressman had declared that he had no liquor in his possession and that he had brought in no liquor from Cuba.

drilled to test the feasibility of well water as a source for Salem's supply, has tested out favorably, the state laboratory reporting the water as grade A, with only one bacteria count in 48 hours.

Supply To Be Added In North Salem

The company's own chemists at Stockton are making a thorough analysis of this water, and if it comes up to requirements, the well water will be turned into the mains to augment the present supply in the north end of the city where additional pressure will be useful.

The filtration plant will be installed, Mr. Helwick told the council, with a view to providing for the future, so that additional units may be built when the city grows sufficiently to require it.

RIDING CLASSES TO START NEXT WEEK

First riding lessons to be given under direction of the new Salem riding academy will be given Friday. It was reported at a meeting of the Salem Hunt club Monday night. The first cross country ride is scheduled for 9 o'clock next Sunday morning and the full schedule will be in operation next Monday. So reported A. H. Nebl of a Portland riding academy who is furnishing the horses and directing the program here, and his assistant and instructor, Captain Alfred Kelly. Rich Reimann was chairman for the meeting.

Permanent organization of the club which is a social organization of the riders and now numbers between 85 and 100 members, will be effected just as soon as all classes are filled. It was announced last night. The program calls for 10 classes with 12 members each, each class to receive one riding lesson a week.

Through the cooperation of Henry Crawford and Mrs. Ella Wilson of the state fair board, the academy has been granted use of the race track and pavilion at the state fairgrounds. "Scotty" Dryden of Oswego will be in charge of the academy.

According to present plans, classes will meet any day of the week except Saturday, which is being saved for kiddies, and Sunday when the cross country races or paper chases will be held. Several class enrollments have been completed.
