PYORRHEA

- The Causes:
1. Overhanging margins of fillings.
 2. Accumulation of tartar around teeth.
 3. Mal-occlusion (teeth that do not strike properly, or crooked teeth).
 4. Ill fitting crowns or bridges.
 5. Picking teeth with tooth picks or similar things which irritate gums.

Pyorrhoea is a supposed germ that attacks the parodontal membrane. This membrane surrounds the root of the tooth, lies between the bony process of the jaw and the root of the tooth itself, performing the same function as the periosteum does or the covering of the bones of the body.

Symptoms: Swollen, bleeding gums, accompanied by an exudation of pus from around roots of the teeth and in the advanced stage the patient has a breath peculiar to the disease.

It causes the gums to recede from the roots of the teeth, therefore the teeth become loosened and eventually will fall out. Unless this disease is checked in its first stages there is very little hope of a permanent cure. Thus the importance of having your teeth properly cleaned and scaled at least twice a year. Also it is very important that you use the proper dentifrice or cleansing agent on your teeth after each meal. There are many on the market and all are good. The idea is to get your teeth clean and keep them clean. The idea is to get your teeth clean and keep them clean. The idea is to get your teeth clean and keep them clean. That a mother should impart to her children this message—That a clean tooth never decays. Stop and think what this means to the growing generation. It eliminates untold suffering. This thing in itself causes the early death of thousands of people. How much nicer it is to have teeth that are free from fillings that are in some instances very unsightly and impair nature's contour of the tooth. So REMEMBER a clean tooth will never decay.
