Reseeding Necessary Some reseeding of grain has been found necessary in this section, due to freezing of barley, oats and vetch. An 80-acre field on the J. B. V. Butler farm, sown to oats and vetch, was damaged heavily because it inclined on a south slope from which the snow melted, leaving the grain unprotected through much of the cold

Winter wheat proved much more hardy, showing a possible 10 per cent damage by freezing. The seeding of alfalfa, which has been rather hesitantly attempted by farmers around Monmouth, is gradually gaining in favor. James Gentle, local dairyman, will seed 20 acres this spring, and A. H. Craven, 10
