

BEARS STILL IN FULL CONTROL

Stock Mart Buffeted About by Abrupt Changes in Speculation

NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—The stock market was buffeted about by abrupt changes in speculative sentiment today, as the bull forces were unable to attract a public following. In the face of a repetition of yesterday's 10 per cent call money.

A sharp rally near the close reduced many of the day's losses, and left the list generally somewhat higher, although presenting a very uneven picture. Total sales fell off toward the 3,000,000 share level.

Confidence Shaken by Series of Breaks

Speculative confidence was unsettled by a number of sharp breaks. Kolster radio dropped nearly 13 points to a new low at 31, in contrast to the 1929 high of 78 3/4, in selling attributed to weakened margin accounts. It regained about half its loss in short covering. Hupp Motors, broke about 5 points to a new 1929 low. Wright tumbled 12 1/2 points, but regained its loss after its favorable report on first quarter operations. International Telephone was again under pressure, selling off about 9 points, but cutting its loss in half later. International paper dropped 7 points on its 1928 earnings statement. Adams Express dropped 20 points in a small turnover, and motor products lost 13.

Street Rises Slowly Starting Light Rally

U. S. Steel was slow in responding to the unfilled orders report, but promoted the general rally in the last half hour with a jump of more than 4 points. Steels generally were firm with the exception of Sloss Sheffield, which lost 6 1/2 points on report of reduced earnings last year. Coppers were bid up on the theory that a jump in price around 20 cents had been discounted. Greene Cananea jumped 6 points. Oils were also brought forward, on the reports of the rising gasoline demand. Pan American issues jumped more than 4 points to new highs.

Merchandise and official equipment shares were strong. Underwood Elliott Fisher, Burroughs, Montgomery Ward, and Sears Roebuck mounted about 5 to 8 points. Woolworth mounted on the news of the split up, but reacted later in profit taking. Crex Carpet jumped 6 points to 40, a new high. American and foreign power gained 6 point on its foreign expansion developments, and Baldwin jumped 9 1/2 on recapitalization prospects.

AIMEE KIDNAPING MAY BE REVIEWED

SACRAMENTO, Apr. 10.—(AP)—Possibilities that the kidnaping story of Aimee Semple McPherson will be fully gone into in the impeachment trial of Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy were seen today when the prosecution questioned detectives concerning investigations in Carmel and along the Mexican border and with the announcement that the evangelist probably will be called to testify Thursday.

The assembly board of managers prosecuting the impeachment case lay a foundation today on which to question Mrs. McPherson about angles of her story that when she disappeared from her church two years ago she was kidnaped and held for ransom.

The testimony of Frank Dewar and Frank Modie, former deputy sheriffs of Los Angeles county, that they were employed by Judge Hardy to find persons on the Mexican border, and testimony of J. W. Buchanan, a Los Angeles detective agency that he investigated the "Carmel angle" of her disappearance opened the way for the prosecutors to question Mrs. McPherson regarding these affairs.

New Hospital is To Be Inspected By State Board

Members of the state board of control will spend Saturday, April 19, at the Dalles inspecting the new state tuberculosis hospital. The hospital is nearing completion and probably will be in readiness for occupancy early in May. Furnishings for the plant have been purchased.

Dr. G. C. Bellingher, superintendent of the local tuberculosis hospital, will accompany the board to The Dalles. The superintendent of The Dalles institution has not yet been selected.

Charles D. Jones, who has resigned as Washington county engineer and roadmaster, has taken an advanced position with the California state highway commission.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA
A BABY REMEDY
APPROVED BY DOCTORS
FOR COLIC, CONSTIPATION, DIARRHEA

CASTORIA
For sale by
Nelson & Hunt Drug Store
Corner Court & Liberty—Tel. 7

ROUMANIA HEARS RUMOR CAROL MAY SUPPLANT SON

Approach of May 10th, the day when Michael, seven-year-old king of Roumania, will, for the first time, formally assume the duties of his office and will reply to addresses of loyalty from the regency and cabinet, revives rumors of the return of Prince Carol, his father, to Roumania, to act as regent, in accordance with the wishes of his mother, Queen Marie. Above, left, Princess Helene, from whom Carol is estranged; center, the boy king, and right, Queen Marie. Below, left to right, Prince Nicholas, Michael's uncle and one of the regents; center, Mme. Lupesco, whom Carol wishes to marry, and right, Prince Carol. Queen Marie and Carol are said to have conferred in Paris concerning her son's return to Roumania since she is declared to be dissatisfied with the regency.

WILBUR MOVES TO CURB OIL OUTPUT

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10.—(AP)—Secretary Wilbur moved today to curb production on two government oil fields—one the Kettleman area near Los Angeles, and the other in New Mexico where the Texas company bored through sandy desert land to find petroleum.

In the case of the Kettleman field the secretary asked four companies operating in the area to arrange a cooperative program which would conserve its petroleum in the ground instead of bringing it into a congested market. The secretary of the interior has the power to ask companies operating on government land to cooperate as far as is considered reasonable in conserving natural resources.

The ruling affecting the newly discovered southwest New Mexico field was the result of a hearing held before the secretary recently concerning the operation of the Texas company on what is generally termed a "group development." The company has drilled a number of wells over a wide area covered by a number of permits issued to individuals who in turn asked the Texas company to perform the actual drilling work.

FARMER FOUND DEAD
Daniel Engleman, who operated a farm on Bethel creek, 10 miles south of Bandon, was found dead Friday morning in his cabin. He was 65 years old and had apparently been dead for several days.

Telephone Firm Is Incorporated For Large Sum

The Northwest Telephone company, with headquarters at Hillsboro and capital stock of $100,000, has been incorporated by Charles E. Wells, Earl W. Gates and E. L. Gheen. Articles were filed in the state corporation department today. Other articles follow:

Twentieth Century Stores, Portland, $5000; R. C. Bradshaw, James Powers and M. L. Brown, Sitka Spruce Pulp & Paper company, Nevada corporation with headquarters at Reedsport; permit issued authorizing company to operate in Oregon.

TEXAS GUINAN IS PLACED ON TRIAL

NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—Texas Guinan of the night clubs went on trial in federal court today and before the first witness was half through his testimony she announced with a smile as bright as Broadway that she was going on a diet "in preparation for prison food."

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

TEXAS GUINAN IS PLACED ON TRIAL

NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—Texas Guinan of the night clubs went on trial in federal court today and before the first witness was half through his testimony she announced with a smile as bright as Broadway that she was going on a diet "in preparation for prison food."

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

The first witness against the diamond bedecked Miss Guinan, who is charged with the misdemeanor of maintaining a nuisance in the Salon Royale, was James J. White, a Washington prohibition agent. He told of going to the Salon Royale several times about a year ago and paying $20 a quart for whiskey and $25 for champagne.

He says he saw waiters slip bottles wrapped in napkins into the laps of patrons, some of whom had to be helped to the street.

Miss Guinan seemed to enjoy it all hugely.

Before the trial opened before Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut Miss Guinan and 10 co-defendants were given a chance to plead guilty, an opportunity quickly seized by all but Miss Guinan.

"They are Greeks and don't know what guilty means," she said to the co-defendants. "I will fight this out if it's the last thing I do in my life."

Cross examination indicated that the defense would be the assertion that Miss Guinan was neither owner nor manager of the Salon Royale, but merely employed there as hostess and entertainer. In her several appearances before United States commissioners she has steadfastly maintained this to be her sole status in the night life of New York.

From the first bang of the gavel the taffy haired lady of the whoopee places did her best to show that she could be the life of the party even when she wasn't being paid for it.

WEST COAST WILL BE TRADE CENTER

EUGENE, Ore., April 10.—(AP)—That the Pacific coast is to be the future center of the world's trade is the opinion of L. W. Hartman, vice president of the John L. Steeb and company, Portland, and president of the Portland Shipping club, who spoke Tuesday at opportunity day sponsored by the school of business administration at the University of Oregon for students.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

While the orient is undeveloped at the present time, it is only a question of a few years until its 800,000,000 of people will offer an enormous market for American products. It is the duty, Mr. Hartman believes, of American business to educate the orient, especially the Chinese, to use their great wealth which lies dormant and rotting. Until it is available, the orient will have no means of buying our products. The great instrument to use in this education is research.

NATIONAL JERSEY CLUB PLANS MEET

NEW YORK, Apr. 10.—(AP)—Samuel F. Crabtree, president of the American Jersey Cattle club, announced today that the club will sponsor four regional Jersey shows in 1929.

The shows will be: The Pacific International Livestock exposition in Portland, Ore., October 26-November 6; the dairy cattle congress at Waterloo, Ia., September 30-October 6; the Kentucky state fair at Louisville, September 8-15, and the eastern states exposition, Springfield, Mass., September 15-21.

Eleven Pacific coast and western states will be represented at Portland—Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Wyoming, California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. The judge will be J. L. Ridgway, president of the Mistissee Creameries of Fort Worth, Tex.

At all four shows there will be special American Jersey cattle awards, and some of the regional winners will be shown at the national dairy show in St. Louis October 12-19.

FIRM INCORPORATED
Dr. F. S. Skiff of Portland is president and C. M. Scherer is secretary of the Bonanza Quick-silver Mining company of Douglas county, which has just been incorporated with a capital stock of $250,000.

Eleven Pacific coast and western states will be represented at Portland—Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Wyoming, California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. The judge will be J. L. Ridgway, president of the Mistissee Creameries of Fort Worth, Tex.

At all four shows there will be special American Jersey cattle awards, and some of the regional winners will be shown at the national dairy show in St. Louis October 12-19.

FIRM INCORPORATED
Dr. F. S. Skiff of Portland is president and C. M. Scherer is secretary of the Bonanza Quick-silver Mining company of Douglas county, which has just been incorporated with a capital stock of $250,000.

Factory Introductory Offer
THURSDAY FRIDAY AND SATURDAY ONLY
TRUE BLACK JASMINE—NARCISSE