ASPARAGUS IS SHIPPED HERE

Carload Reaches Salem Yesterday Bringing Prices Lower Than Usual

Arrival of a carload of California asparagus in Salem Thursday furnished the big vegetable excitement of the week, with practically every store displaying large quantities of grass at prices lower than usual. This variety was selling at two bunches for 25 cents.

The first of the Woodburn grass is expected here this morning and the best grade will sell at 25 cents. The first Salem-grown asparagus appeared in local stores Thursday, but stalks are very small compared to the "imports". Extra fancy California is bringing 35 cents. The local is selling at 20 cents a bunch.

Hot-House Tomatoes Here From Roseburg

The first hot-house tomatoes from Roseburg were on the market yesterday, and despite the high price of 55 cents a pound, demand was fairly brisk. The tomatoes are none too ripe, although of course a few days on the shelf will remedy most of this condition.

Local cucumbers are quite plentiful, at 15, 20 and 25 cents each. The largest ones measure nearly a foot long and look more like baby banana squash, color excepted. The quality is excellent. Peas are cheaper, with the top grade at two pounds for 25 cents. Wholesale quotations are 10 cents a pound.

Texas Cabbage Now Best Upon Market

Canonball cabbage from Texas is the best variety on the market and sells at 7 cents a pound, retail. The cabbage is sound all the way through.

Roseburg broccoli is a drug on the market, with people turning their appetite attention to green peas and asparagus. Broccoli prices are the lowest of the season and are likely to go lower if the supply continues good.

Local rhubarb is coming in more plentiful, and will crowd the California supplies off the market shortly. As it is, there is an over-supply and prices are lower at from five cents a pound to three pounds for 25 cents, as a range.

Home Grown Onions And Irishes Plentiful

Jumbo celery, the extra-size stalk, is 19 cents each, with smaller varieties selling cheaper.

Home grown green onions and home grown radishes are becoming quite plentiful, and are selling at 10 cents a bunch. Quite a few are still available at two pounds for 25 cents. Parsnips are beginning to shrivel, despite which the wholesale quotation is up to a dollar this week. Six pounds for 25 cents is about the lowest price.

Spinach is coming on with renewed force, large quantities of fresh looking greens selling at three pounds for 25 cents.

DENTISTRY TALKED BY DOCTOR BRUNK

Dr. Estill Brunk, in charge of the dental work for the Marion county health demonstration service, gave an interesting talk on the history of the dental profession before the "Y's" men's class at the Salem Y. M. C. A. Thursday morning. He sketched the story of the art of dental work from pre-Christian days, showing how Egyptians and other people of early civilization had made an attempt to safeguard dental health.

Much of the development now found throughout America has come within the last few decades and has been instigated largely by United States schools and practitioners, the doctor said.

In former days dentists were also barbers and the trade was held by the medical profession as a purely mechanical one. Dr. Carl Miller, newly elected president of the "Y's" men club presided at the meeting. Each Thursday morning the members of the club assemble for an hour of fellowship preceded by an hour's workout in the gymnasium.

LAMB PRODUCTION BEING CUT DOWN

Late warm weather in spring necessitating much dry feeding of sheep has cut down the number and the quality of lambs produced in the Stayton district, said John W. Mayo, a business visitor in Salem this week. As a whole agriculture prospects look good at Stayton in Mayo's opinion. The canner there, with a pack of 65,000 cases, is becoming a great asset to the community. Both fruits and vegetables are handled. The canner is entirely owned and controlled by a cooperative association consisting of producers in the Stayton territory.

STRAWBERRIES COME IN FAST

Price Continues High Despite Increased Shipments Here

Strawberries are coming in more plentiful each day to add their mite of variety to the scarcity of fruits. California is shipping here now in more than express shipments, but the market price is still "up in the air", at 30 cents a box.

Grapefruit is good and also plentiful, at most any price one wants to pay, depending upon condition and size; also age. Good fruit costs 25 cents for two heads. Bananas dropped a cent wholesale early this week, this condition being general. These seldom sold for less than three pounds for 25 cents this week, notwithstanding the price change.

Apples are still offered in large quantities, although the price remains steady, considering the time of year. The cheap orange market is largely responsible for failure of the apple deal to take on an upish tone at this season.

Oranges are a little firmer in some sizes, but still selling cheaply enough that all may eat them.

The price range is wide, from less than 20 cents a dozen on the smaller ones to 60 and 75 cents on extra fancies.

Proper lubrication of farm machinery is necessary even in the busiest season, if depreciation is to be minimized and poor service avoided, says the experiment station. Because farm machines must of necessity be built light and sold at a low cost, bearings are generally small and not always protected from dust and grit.

HIGH SCHOOL TALKS ON AIR THIS NIGHT

O. S. C. Host to First Annual Extempore Speaking Contest

O. S. C., April 25.—Arrangements are complete for the first annual high school extempore speaking and interpretation contest this week, in which Salem high has two entrants.

Credentials have been received here for Marvin Byers, winner in the extempore contest, and Gertrude Winslow, winner in the interpretation contest, both of Salem. These compete with district winners from 11 other cities in the first contest and 10 in the second.

Preliminaries were held Thursday when all but six contestants were eliminated for the finals Friday night. All six of these entering the finals will receive certificates of merit from Delta Sigma Rho and National Collegiate Players, honor fraternities in public speaking and dramatics which are sponsoring the contest.

The entire affair is to be broadcast over KOAC, the college radio station, Friday night. First place winners in each contest will receive $50 in gold given by the fraternities sponsoring the contest, and an engraved gold medal given by the Oregon State College Alumni association. Second place winners will receive bronze medals.

While on the campus all contestants will be accorded free entertainment and will have an opportunity to visit classes in public speaking and other branches in which they are most interested.

State Superintendent Charles A. Howard, a member of the executive committee of the statewide contest, will preside over the finals Friday night.
