TWELVE GIRLS GET APPRENTICE JOBS

Apparently more business positions are open to girls in Salem right now than to boys, with 12 girls selected already and but one boy for the annual apprenticeship work being started by the senior commercial students of the high school. Merritt Davis, head of the department, reports that a number of boys are ready to spend the half day as apprentice salesmen, bookkeepers, accountants or general office assistants.

Mr. Davis also reports that in the first two or three days this year more students have been placed than last year, and sees in this an indication of opening up of business here. Business men have expressed pleasure and are taking more and more interest in this annual half-day free work of the pupils, he says. Students spend a half day in the office, that employers may get acquainted with prospective employees and that students may secure actual experience before being placed on their own in the business world. Business men, whether they intend to hire a student or not, may secure an assistant any time the remainder of the school year by getting in touch with Mr. Davis at the high school.
