

HOUSE IS BUILT ON STAGE HERE

Small Cottage Idea Will be Presented at Elsinore Theatre Tomorrow

Preparations are underway at the Elsinore theatre for building a regular-sized house on the stage. Shows will be continued on each Wednesday for an indefinite period. George B. Guthrie, owner, stated Monday, former reports that Fanchon Marco would be seen only on the weekends were declared erroneous, the company having arranged with the Elsinore to keep on the regular mid-week schedule.

The screen attraction will be "Saturday Children," a story by Maxwell Anderson, a comedy drama which held Broadway in its spell for nine months and won the Pulitzer prize as the best play of 1927.

In the screen version of the play, Corinne Griffith is starred, and the original dialogue of the play has been retained almost verbatim.

Miss Griffith is supported by an exceptional cast recruited from legitimate stage of former years, and carefully chosen for their experience and technique in the use of dialogue.

The house, which is the main set for Fanchon & Marco's "A Cottage Small Idea" which opens at the Elsinore theatre Wednesday as the stage attraction, is a sizeable affair, boasting a large front porch with clinging vines, spacious living room and commodious upstairs accommodations. It was built in the studio of Fanchon & Marco in Los Angeles and transported to Salem in sections.

The house is large enough to accommodate the Elsinore Sunkist Beauties, members of the orchestra and the principals of the "idea" which includes Rose Valyda, Dorothy and Harry Dixon, Franklin Record, Bert Prival, Reeve McLain and Julia and Frances.

The house is first occupied during the course of the show by the orchestra, then the Sunkist Beauties who demonstrate in one number their ability as "home girls" in a hilarious wash tub episode.

Legislature Fails To Act On Reward

The 1929 legislature apparently did not take any action in connection with the recommendation by Ex-Governor Pierce that the state pay a reward of $1000 for the capture and conviction of the three D'Autremont brothers, who are serving life terms in the state penitentiary for dynamiting a Southern Pacific passenger train in Siskiyou tunnel several years ago. Three trainmen were killed.

The records show that the secretary of state transmitted the recommendation to the speaker of the house, and that he signed an official receipt. There is no record to show that the recommendation was referred to the ways and means committee, or that the legislature took any action on the recommendation.

Free Entry by Officials Of Government Criticized By Federal Jury at N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 6.—(AP)—Freedom from customs inspection, a privilege commonly accorded officials on government business, was condemned today by members of the federal grand jury that sat in April as leading to various abuses "and to the natural suspicion that the claimed privilege of free entry is really being used as a cover for the importation of contraband."

After the statement criticizing the practice of free entry, signed by every member of the jury, was made public without comment by U. S. Attorney Charles H. Tuttle it was learned that the jurors had spent ten days investigating the practice immediately following upon the arrival of the steamer Cristobal on March 25. The grand jurors took no action as such, waiting until they were discharged to issue today's statement as private citizens.

There were more than a dozen members of the house of representatives on the Cristobal, several of whom were granted free entry in advance as being on a government mission. Representative William M. Morgan of Ohio, who was on the boat but who had not been granted free entry, demanded that he be accorded the Heart of Man Bears Cry For Supernatural, Smith

Nazarene Pastor in Sermon Sunday Says no Religion Acceptable Unless Apprehends God Experimentally

Following is a resume of "Man's Cry for the Supernatural," sermon which Rev. L. D. Smith of the Shem church of the Nazarenes gave here Sunday on the text: "I beseech thee; show me the Glory," Ex. 33:18.

Now and then the world for a brief space of time has become so immersed in materialism that the majority of men have seemed to be content to live for this life only, ending in oblivion. But with these few brief exceptions, which have not included all men that lived in their day, the world of man has cried for something which is instinctively felt beyond the veil of time and the sense of the world. In other words, in the heart of man is a cry for the supernatural.

As Paul, the great apostle, said: "Even the heathen are feeling after God, if perchance they may find him." There can be found no people among the sons of night, who are not trying to touch the border line of the supernatural. Millions have never heard of the white man's God but in their breasts is found the cry of the text: "I beseech thee, show me thy glory."

Amidst all the polytheism and religious wretchedness of their time, the most sincere among the Greeks and Romans prophesied of a time when the chief among the gods would come down and walk among mortals. While the glory of Solomon's temple was still shining and the shekinah came down in the most Holy Place, Isaiah told of the "Child born and the Son given," and from every true Hebrew breast went up a mighty cry to God for the coming Messiah. When heaven announced His birth by the sight of the strange "Star of Bethlehem" and the singing of seraphims, the Magi of the far east as well as the seers in Jerusalem welcomed the answer to the cry of their heart for a manifestation of God to men. Back of all the burning candles, counting beads, wearing long robes, marching on crusades, telling of strange visions and going on long pilgrimages there was a strong faith in the supernatural and a pathetic call for its revelation. This cry for the supernatural was not only back in the old days before education had done so much for man, but now in the days of learning, when "knowledge is increased," in the breast of every son of Adam may be found the cry of the text, "I beseech thee, show me thy glory."

God still lives and reveals Himself to men. Hungry heart, you may know God experimentally, walk with Him and in Him have the cry of your heart met. There was a time when God came down on the mountain and spoke till an awestricken people cried: "Let not God speak with us any more lest we die." But in these last times He has spoken to us through His son. There was a time when God came upon His people but now He has promised to dwell in them. In the old day He visited Abraham under the oak of Mamre but in this new glorious day He has promised to abide with His people forever. In the old day God revealed Himself to His people in dreams, visions and physical deliverances, but in this new day He will touch on the educational as well as the spiritual life of His people directly to man's spirit.

The Christ that is not supernatural will not meet the world's heart cry. No matter how faultless the philosophy, how sound the policy, how inviting sociology, no system of religion is going to "fill the bill" that does not teach men how to apprehend God experimentally. Our soul needs God, longs for God, cries for God. No one else or nothing else can fill it. Friend, your soul was made for God. It is as vast that though you might "gain the whole world," your soul would still be empty without God.

This world has provided and can provide for all but the heart. Bread will satisfy the hunger; water will allay the thirst; household fires will warm the physical; our weariness can be relieved by outward rest, but no outward thing can make the heart pure. The calmest day cannot calm the passions. The fairest scene will not beautify the soul. The richest music will not make harmony within. This world cannot provide for the heart. No one but God can do that.

Friend, your heart is the only unwinged bird of all creation. This earth failed to give it wings, but when it becomes one with its creator, it will "take the wings of the morning" and fly away to the pure and holy and be at rest. The promise is: "The that wait upon the Lord shall mount up on wings as eagles." If you will brush aside all the sham, and cry to God with the never-to-be denied petition, "I beseech thee, show me thy glory," the supernatural God will reveal Himself to you in the new birth and the baptism of the Spirit.
