Zena's Crop Of Berries Looks Good

ZENA, May 7.—The strawberry raising industry is booming in the Zena district and the hills west of Zena are thickly dotted with large patches of the luscious berries which are said to be among the best received by Salem canneries. Strawberries thrive in red soil and in that respect the Zena hills are especially adapted to strawberry culture. This year the plants are exceptionally fine and berries are already beginning to set. The marshal, Oregon and Etterberry varieties are used almost exclusively here. Among those who have added to their already considerable acreage this year are W. Frank Crawford, Wayne D. Henry, J. S. Worthington and Walter B. Hunt. W. Frank Crawford has been known for years as the "Gooseberry king" of the northwest and from all indications he will soon be able to add the title "strawberry king" to his name.
