STRAWBERRIES NOW COMING IN RAPIDLY

Increased shipments of strawberries mark the only change on the fruit row for the week. Prices remain the same, $3.75 wholesale or two boxes for 45 cents, retail. Shipments are coming from California. Quality is increasing steadily. The demand for strawberries more than keeps up with the supply.

Pineapples, too, are coming in numbers more than sufficient to meet the demand. These are shipped from Cuba. The price is around 40 cents each.

Orange prices continue higher than recently, due to the lag end of the navel season, and the lull between coming of the Valencia. Grapefruit prices have a tendency to become firmer, with $4.50 the wholesale quotation all the way through. The small seedless fruit are selling at five cents each, as the cheapest grapefruit offering.

BOTTOM DROPS OUT OF WHEAT MARKET

Wheat prices have taken the greatest toboggan the last week that has hit the market in more than three years, with white wheat down to 94 1/2 cents locally and red down to 92 cents. These prices were quoted Thursday. Local millers assert that the

Retail Vegetable Prices Remain High Despite New And Increased Shipments

Consumer price of fresh vegetables is holding high and steady, despite larger shipments and increased returns from the home gardens. As a rule, vegetable prices begin to tumble at this time of the year—in fact, grocers say most prices should be cheaper.

More and more and better and better vegetables are coming in, and especially attractive in the store window are clean, fresh onions and radishes grown by Mr. Savage, local gardener. Nothing new was added the past week in the variety of vegetables, but the quality and quantity ever increases.

Asparagus is down to 15 cents a bunch, mostly home grown and fine grass. Artichokes continue to sell at 15 cents.

Turnips, good quality and medium size, are coming in from California and are retailing at 10 cents a bunch.

The first water cress, used largely for salads, was brought to the market the latter part of the week and is selling at 10 cents a bunch.

Hot house tomatoes, grown in the Chase gardens at Eugene, are offered at 45 cents a pound. Tomatoes are way up on the pocket-book, largely because they are hard to get. Wholesale quotations on those from the south have reached $6.50.

A good grade of beets, though not large, sells at 10 cents a bunch in the stores. Carrots, like the beets shipped in from the south, sell at the same price.

New peas are offered at two pounds for 25 cents and the price the store of new potatoes continues at three pounds for 25 cents.

New crop spinach is rolling from Vancouver, the first of the tender green leaves being received local stores yesterday. The price is two pounds for 15 cents.

Onions are offered in several varieties, ranging from the new home-grown ones to the silver skin or sweet from Texas. Home-grown onions sell at 10 cents a bunch, and green onions shipped in from other patches retail at five cents a bunch. The silver skin, or sweet onion, sells at three pounds for 20 cents and the old dry onions may be bought at the rate of three pounds for 25 cents.

Celery prices are up, due largely to the lag end of the season and the consequent scarcity. Store stalk, and as high as 20 cents.

Prices range around 15 cents a bunch. Cauliflower has about reached the end of the season, also, and is selling higher, at 20 cents. The first of the California later crop is expected in Salem shortly.

Garlic is up, at 40 cents, wholesale, though some of the stores are selling it as low as 35 cents.

Lettuce runs generally fine, with the heads solid in almost any size one seeks them. The price range, with a medium-size head obtainable for 10 cents and the larger at two for 25 cents.

Cucumbers are down slightly, grocers selling the long ones at 15 cents each. Cabbage is selling at seven cents a pound, retail.

Local radishes cost 10 cents a bunch and the small round red ones at three bunches for 10 cents.

Rhubarb, large healthy stalks, are marked four pounds for 25 cents. Rhubarb offered now is practically all Salem-grown.

Parsley, not greatly in demand, sells at five cents a bunch. The quality is all that could be desired. A few yams, better known as sweet potatoes, are offered. Price now is two pounds for 25 cents.

MAY 27 HELD LAST DATE FOR APPEAL

In case W. M. Davis of Portland appeals from the ballot title for the proposed referendum measure attacking the 1929 legislative act creating two additional circuit judgeships in Multnomah county, it will be necessary to file such appeal by May 27, according to announcement made by the secretary of state here today.

The ballot title which was completed by the attorney general today reads:

"Purpose—To provide for two additional judges of the circuit court of the state of Oregon for the fourth judicial district, comprising Multnomah county."

Following receipt of the appeal petition it would be necessary for the supreme court to hear the arguments of attorneys, and write its decision. This probably could not be done until sometime in June or subsequent to the date when the completed referendum petitions must be filed in the state department.

The attorney general, in a recent opinion, held that the completed referendum petitions must be filed by June 4, in case the measure is to be referred to the voters at the general election in November, 1930.

Mr. Davis is president of the Oregon state bar association.
