JAP AMBITION HELD FAILURE

Plan to Dominate Industry of Entire World Unsuccessful, Says Noble

Japan's gigantic scheme for capturing a world monopoly of industry and leaving the other nations naught but the task of supplying raw materials—and also the reasons why that scheme didn't work—were described by Clarence W. Noble, owner of Skyline Orchard, in an address before the Salem Lions club Friday noon.

The Japanese government sent envoys to the principal industrial nations, and these men returned and reported that by adopting labor saving machinery from the occidental countries and operating it with workers under Japan's low wage scale, Japan could overcome all competition.

This the Japanese set about to do. But they retained the principal features of the feudal system headed by the Samurai. Mr. Noble said, in a address before the Samurais in exchange for their subject's labor and loyalty, must insure the latter against want. This tradition has since been translated into a law which provides that no worker may be discharged except on three years' notice with three years' pay in advance.

The result has been that every employer has too many men, and seeks to lengthen out his contract so as to keep them all busy indefinitely; in industry, this runs counter to the development of reaction, discourages the use of labor saving machinery, and develops a situation whereby labor just receive low wages for its productive period, to make up for possible periods of idleness. There is a heavy percentage of business failures as a result.

Japan is also handicapped by its educational system, which necessarily stresses memorization of written and printed characters because of the ramifications of the several languages employed. This prevents development of reasoning powers, and results in an abnormal tendency to imitate, so that whenever a profitable business appears, so many persons engage in it that nearly all fail. Ancestor worship also discourages advancement, Mr. Noble declared.

WILLAMETTE PROFS TO MAKE SPEECHES

With the coming of May and its host of high school commencement programs, several professors of Willamette university find themselves with a number of speaking engagements. Most of the schools to be addressed are in Oregon, but a few are out of the state.

President Carl G. Doney has granted only two requests for his time, the schools being Grants Pass and Hood River. Professor James T. Matthews will address high school graduation at Redmond and Prineville, and at elite-grade graduations at Jefferson. Professor Leland Chapin will speak at the commencement exercises at Aumsville and Gervais high schools.

Dean Roy Hewitt of the college of law has the largest number of speaking engagements scheduled. To date he has appointments at Boardman, Arlington, Umatilla, Perrydale and Marshfield in Oregon; he will also speak at Lewiston, Idaho, and at Ridgefield, Wash.

Lloyd Reynolds On Inside Track For High Office

Lloyd T. Reynolds of Salem, state senator, is the leading candidate for district governor of the Lions clubs in Oregon, reports received here indicated. Delegates from a number of the clubs throughout the state are pledged to vote for him. The Salem club will be represented by at least 35 persons, including members and their wives, at the district convention at Tillamook. It was reported at the Friday luncheon. The club will have a stunt on the program.

Program to Broadcast At Corvallis

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, May 10.—One major event of women's weekend Saturday and Sunday, May 11 and 12, will be "put on the air" for the benefit of those mothers who cannot be here in person to enjoy the festivities with their children. The entire program of the annual Mothers' banquet Saturday night will be broadcast over college radio station KOAC, starting at 8:15.

The program this year featuring four prominent persons of Oregon will deal with women in relation to spiritual, social, and educational affairs and to the world at large, each speaker handling a different phase of the subject. Added facilities in the new Memorial Union building makes it possible to serve this banquet in one room to approximately 1900 persons.

Mrs. W. P. Remington, wife of the Episcopal bishop of eastern Oregon, will be the principal speaker of the banquet. Others will include Marshall Dana, associate editor of the Oregon Journal; Marian Miller, staff member of the Morning Oregonian; and Dr. W. J. Kerr, president of the college.

Besides the major events scheduled for this week and especially for the mothers, the third annual intercollegiate track and field meet will be held and the board of regents will hold their annual spring meeting on the campus. The track meet Saturday afternoon will also be broadcast.

WOMAN LEGISLATOR SPEAKS AT COLLEGE

Mrs. Dorothy McCullough Lee, representative from Multnomah county at the last session of the Oregon legislature, spoke on "Women in Business," at the Willamette university chapel Thursday. The world of creative things and women have to a considerable extent moved out of the home, she declared. Women are in business largely because they have more spare time than formerly. They can have so much of their sewing, baking and other household duties done by specialists now that there is little in the home which they are required to do.

Mrs. Lee declared that women who spend all their time in society and in planning bigger bridge parties are contributing virtually nothing to the welfare of their communities. The war showed some things that women could do when put to it, and Mrs. Lee declared that this was a good by-product of it.

Selling insurance, real estate, advertising, architecture, medicine, dentistry, law, and even cutting meat were some of the fields in which Mrs. Lee declared that women were entering with considerable success. She asserted further that the horizon of their activities is widening, and spoke of the field of participation in public business. In closing Mrs. Lee complimented the men of the Oregon legislature for the way in which they accepted her presence and cooperated with her in her work last winter.

Salem Man Is Only Accident Victim In Week

BIDS ON PAVING CAUSE OF ROW

Advice of Attorney General Obtained to Settle Highway Controversy

In case it is found that there is a monopoly in the sale of cement, the state highway commission should advertise and solicit bids on different types of pavement, according to a legal opinion prepared by Attorney General VanWinkle here Friday.

The opinion was requested by Joe Deyers, attorney for the highway commission, in connection with the solicitation of bids for paving the Canemah-New Era section of the Pacific highway. The commission recently advertised for bids on cement pavement, with the result that the Warren Construction company and other concerns dealing in black top materials objected on the grounds that the proposals were not competitive. The commission then deferred awarding of the contract.

If the highway commission should find that there is no monopoly in the sale of cement, then it would be justified in awarding the contract on concrete, the attorney held.

"It is evident," read the attorney general's opinion, "that the spirit of the law would not be violated in advertising or in receiving competitive bids between different paving materials and specifications, especially wherever one of them is or are controlled to a greater extent by a monopoly."

What action will be taken by the highway commission in connection with the solicitation of bids for paving the Canemah-New Era section of the Pacific highway could not be determined here Friday. It was stated, however, that readvertisement for proposals would be delayed until the opinion has been given careful study by members of the highway commission.

Artichokes Grow Well Near Here

Artichokes will grow well in the Willamette valley according to W. Eberhardt who was successful in their growth fully 28 years in Lane county near Crabtree.

"Sure they'll grow," said Eberhardt who told about his experience in raising artichokes. He said they grew like potatoes in the fields where he planted them. Cows eat the stalks readily and so did horses while the roots were large in size. Eberhardt said one phase of his experience demonstrated to him that the artichoke root must be very carefully dug else the plant would become self-propagating.

Real Pal is This Leopard And 'Bobbie'

Miss Bobbie Todd, principal woman animal trainer with the Al G. Barnes circus, and her pet leopard "Spot" are great pals, and next to a good feed Spot loves to take a spin down the boulevard with a pretty girl at the wheel of a sport model roadster. Spot is just one of the 1200 animal actors in the world's largest wild animal show which comes to Salem Saturday, May 18, and will be seen in the menagerie and grand opening spectacle, "Alladin and the Parade of Gold," edition 1929.

Scores of fierce jungle bred lions, tigers and leopards are exhibited in a steel arena by fearless trainers, both men and women. Lotus, largest hippo, and Tusko, the largest elephant on earth, a foot taller than Jumbo, are features of the big show this year.

Road to be Surveyed in Near Future

Survey of the North Santiam road project south from Detroit into the Marion lake country and through to a junction with the highway to Sisters and Bend is probable some time this summer, according to W. H. Lynch, district engineer for the bureau of public roads of the federal government.

In a statement made to the Statesman Friday Lynch said: "We are not yet in a position to give you definite information as to when the survey will begin as the project is not yet approved by our Washington office. We anticipate approval in the near future."

According to Lynch the survey will be made during the coming summer, but whether early in the year or later has not yet been determined.

BIG IRRIGATION PROJECT TOLD

Plan Involves 19,000 Acres Situated East of Salem; Water Right Given

Irrigation of 19,000 acres of land lying immediately east of Salem and south of Lake Labish may result from an order issued by State Engineer Luper here Friday granting a transfer and change in use of an old territorial water right heretofore used for the development of power in the town of Jefferson.

This water right was said to have been initiated by grant of the territorial legislature in 1857 and by actual appropriation, diversion and use since that date. A right to the use of 238 cubic feet per second is claimed.

Under the new project the water is to be diverted from the north fork of the Santiam river in the vicinity of Stayton, and conveyed through an enlargement of the Salem canal or through a similar canal into the channel of Mill Creek and from this channel diverted for distribution to the lands to be irrigated in the vicinity of Salem.

Two irrigation canals are to be constructed diverting water from Mill Creek at a point near the old boys' training school. The larger canal will run in an easterly direction, following the contour of the grand surface for about six miles and thence northerly to the Silverton road.

The application for a change of this water right was made and granted to Joseph Fatjo, but the identity of the real promoters of the project has not been revealed. The fees paid the state for the order granting the transfer were $962.
