LABOR SURPLUS IS FOUND IN OREGON

Farm and Fruit Work May Reduce Supply Says General Report

A surplus of labor is prevalent throughout the state but road construction work and the opening up of the fruit and general farm work will soon relieve the situation according to a report made Monday by C. H. Gram, chairman of the seasonal employment commission of the U. S. Employment service. Mr. Gram is assisted locally by C. A. Kells, a member of the seasonal employment commission. The report by cities throughout the state follows:

Following is a report according to districts are that the local seasonal employment conditions in Oregon:

Portland—There is a great surplus of unemployed here at the present time and conditions in general are not up to the standard of previous years at this time.

Salem—There is a supply of help in all lines of work but we expect the supply and demand to be well balanced in the coming season.

Corvallis—There is a surplus of common labor here and we expect the local labor to handle all future seasonal work.

Eugene—There is a surplus of workers for the city, that is building tradesmen. There is a shortage of good lumber workers. Indications are that the local labor will be sufficient to handle the city's future work but not quite sufficient for work outside the city.

Forest Grove—There is a large surplus of unemployed here but the seasonal work is expected to absorb most of this surplus.

McMinnville—There is a surplus of unemployed here, chiefly in lumbering, wood cutting and household work. We expect a surplus throughout the season.

La Grande—There is a large surplus of unemployed, a great many of whom are transients.

Pendleton—Conditions are fairly well balanced, majority of the unemployed being transients.

Medford—We have a surplus of common labor on hand and indications point to a large surplus throughout the season.

Hood River—There is a surplus of unemployed in this vicinity.

Willamette Forensic Year Pleases; Men's Teams for Debate Win Signal Honors

A report recently made by the coach and manager of forensics at Willamette university indicates that the past season has proved gratifying to all concerned. Willamette not only won a good percentage of all contests entered, but also prepared a group of new speakers to carry on forensic activity in the next few years.

For the four years immediately preceding the past season, the burden of the forensic schedule fell on the shoulders of two men and a small group of women. The result was that so far as the men were concerned, Roy Harland, a sophomore, was the only man on the squad at the beginning of the season who had had any experience in intercollegiate debating. However, there were several promising men in the freshman class.

Jack Routh, who had had one year's experience in Salem high school, and Charles Campbell, who had had three years' experience at Dallas high school, turned out for training and practice and did creditable work during the season. Warren McMinnimee, of the freshman law class, also worked consistently, and contributed his share of strength to the squad.

Strong Team Deafened

The men's debating schedule opened with a dual no-decision debate with the Oregon Normal school. This was followed, in spring vacation, by a debate with the University of Southern California, who were reputed coast champions by their defeats of universities of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah and Arizona. This debate was held in Dallas high school before the student body; the judges awarded the Willamette team a 2-1 decision. The next debate, which was an extemporaneous affair, so far as the Willamette men were concerned, was with the University of Arizona. It was in this contest that McMinnimee made himself well known for his excellent extempore work. Willamette, however, lost the decision of the critic judge.

15 Teams Turned Down

The University of Wyoming team, also heralded as one of the best, fell before the Willamette team. Thus, the Willamette team made a creditable showing on a heavy schedule. Fifteen other schools requested debates with Willamette, but were refused for two reasons: lack of funds, and the wisdom of debating larger schools who were members of the Pacific Coast Forensic League. Willamette college is the only independent college in Oregon holding membership in this league and is practically forced to schedule most of its debates with members of the organization.

The women's team, though worked with consistent ill luck. In three debates scheduled with Lintfield, College of Puget Sound and Oregon State college, they sustained three defeats. The

SWAPPING OF TRUCK RIGHTS PROTESTED

Portland Merchants Say 20 Mile Limit Plan Is Unfair to Them

A number of Portland merchants have protested to Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state, with relation to the reciprocal traffic agreement which allows Washington trucks to operate within a 20-mile limit inside of the Oregon boundaries.

Although Oregon trucks are allowed a similar concession in the state of Washington, it was contended by Portland merchants that the Washington trucks have a decided advantage.

It was pointed out that under the reciprocal agreement Washington merchants and wholesale houses can truck to any part of Portland. Oregon trucks, under the agreement, cannot reach any of the larger Washington cities other than Vancouver.

Mr. Hoss said that he is powerless to alter the Portland merchants' appeal for the reason that an act of the last legislature provides for the reciprocal traffic arrangement.

Most of the protests received by the secretary of state came from Portland's department stores and wholesale concerns.
