GRETA GARBO NOW FAIR SPY

Famous Film Star Appears At Elsinore as Exotic Heroine

As the exotic heroine of a spectacular drama of military intrigue that spread through Europe before the World War, Greta Garbo scores another screen triumph in "The Mysterious Lady" which opens tomorrow at the Elsinore theatre.

In the new picture Miss Garbo is seen as a beautiful Russian spy. Conrad Nagel plays opposite as the young Austrian officer who falls under her charm and is disgraced. A thrilling love climax brings them together again.

Fred Niblo, who also directed Miss Garbo in "The Temptress" handled the megaphone on the new production, filming the story from an adaptation written by Hess Meredith from an original German novelist.

Included in the stellar supporting cast are Gustav von Seyffertitz and Edward Connelly.

"The Fanchon and Marco Varieties" which will be shown in connection with the feature production include Beeman and Grace, who recently finished an engagement as headliners on the Australian vaudeville stage. Frederick Bowers, who acts as Master of Ceremonies was the country's most famous composer of popular songs twenty-five years ago.

Then there are the Pickfords, novelty juggling act which has just been recruited from the New York stage. The bill by far, tops all past presentations seen at the Elsinore.
