The BUFFWOOD

The BUFFWOOD, patent number 1681773, has an exclusive hot blast wood firebox, 17 inches long by 8 1/2 inches wide by 9 inches deep—accommodates large chunks of wood. This range has no ash pan, as the hot blast features of the patented firebox assures proper combustion or a practical elimination of ashes. This feature permits the large 28-inch by 18-inch oven, properly cast, braced to prevent warping.

The ARCTIC

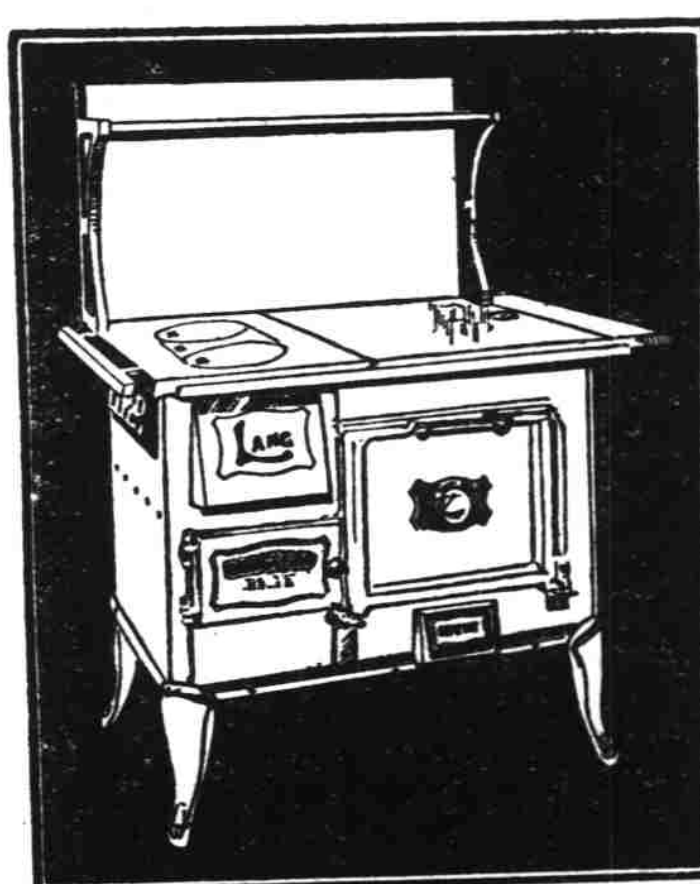

For Coal or Wood

The Lang Arctic pictured below is another leading LANG model, symbolic of range perfection. Furnished in nickel finish or all enamel, sandstone, gray, blue, apple green or white, or in enamel trim.

The LANGWOOD

The patented LANGWOOD has a large, wide wood firebox, utilizing the hot air draft. With one filling of wood, this range will keep fire four times longer than any other range on the market. 75% of what is called ashes will prove to be charcoal if viewed under a microscope—this is consumed in the Langwood, a feature which eliminates the ash pan and allows the large 28-inch by 18-inch oven. Ask your neighbor who owns one.
