Rome Hop Longest Ever Planned

Roger Q. Williams and Captain Lewis A. Yancey are waiting at Old Orchard Beach, Me., for old man weather to give them at least an even break before attempting the 4,700 mile trans-Atlantic flight to Rome. The map shows their probable route and which would give them the world distance flight record if they are successful in making Rome. By an odd coincidence, the present record holders, Ferrari and his co-pilot, hopped from Rome when they flew 4,400 miles to Brazil. The picture above shows the Bellanca, Green Flash, in which the daring Americans will fly, as it landed at Old Orchard Beach after the hop from New York.
