

OIL PRODUCTION IS CONSIDERED

Conference Takes Up Plans to Curb Output; Eleven States Represented

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 11 — (AP) — Troubled for two days by vigorous discussion of President Hoover's order barring public lands from oil prospecting, the governor's conference of oil conservation late today began actual consideration of a proposed interstate compact designed to prevent over-production and waste in the oil industry by controlling drilling and general oil development.

The official delegates to the conference, four governors and personal representatives of seven other governors, met in closed session to discuss with Mark L. Requa, chairman of the conference, the general outlines of the compact.

Many Controversial Problems Presented
The views and ideas of every producing section of the United States had been presented from the platform; Mr. Requa's statement that he would urge coercive measures if the industry did not take advantage of the opportunity to cooperate had been moderated and then brought under attack; and the atmosphere was generally declared full of highly controversial angles of the conservation problem.

The demand of the independent operators, made through W. H. Gray, president of the National Association of Independent Oil Producers, that a tariff of similar restriction be placed on oil importations, was still being heard on the floor of the conference, but in diminished volume, and whether this subject would be allowed to intrude any further into the deliberations had not been decided definitely by Chairman Requa.

Attack on Hoover Held Out of Order

One ruling of the chair, however, was considered significant. That was his decision that a resolution presented by independents of the mid-continent field calling for a limitation on crude oil importations and a rescinding of the Hoover public lands order, was out of order. Later the chairman said any findings of the Rocky Mountain states could be brought on the floor for consideration, and this was taken to mean by the representatives of the oil industry that the Hoover policy would be thrown open for discussion if they so desired.

The day's harvest of addresses, concluding statements of position from every state party to the conference, as well as from numerous oil and gas associations.

HOSPITAL PATIENTS ARE REAL VETERANS

Four patients in the Oregon state hospital here have been state charges for more than 46 years, according to a report submitted to the state board of control by Dr. R. E. Lee Steiner, superintendent of the institution. One of these patients, who is 89 years old, has been a patient at the hospital for 51 years.

These four patients were transferred to the state hospital here in 1883 from the Hawthorne hospital in Portland. Prior to that time the insane were housed in the Portland institution which was conducted under contract. The care of these four patients has cost the state approximately $34,500. Ten patients have been in the hospital more than 40 years.

It will be the future policy of the state hospital, Dr. Steiner said, to discharge fully, upon leaving the state hospital, all ex-soldiers taken out by representatives of the veterans bureau for the purpose of hospitalization in their own institutions.

Forty-four ex-soldiers were paroled from the Oregon state hospital to the United States veterans bureau during the period March, 1925, to April, 1929.

SPECIAL CLASSES HAVE 93 STUDENTS

Ninety-three pupils have been served in the five special rooms in the Salem schools this year, E. A. Miller, director of the department of research and guidance, has reported to the city superintendent. This year makes the close of five years' service for backward and subnormal children, and shows a marked change of conditions over the beginning of the department five years ago. At the present there are few misfit children in the regular grade school courses, and these not of the inferior type, the report states.

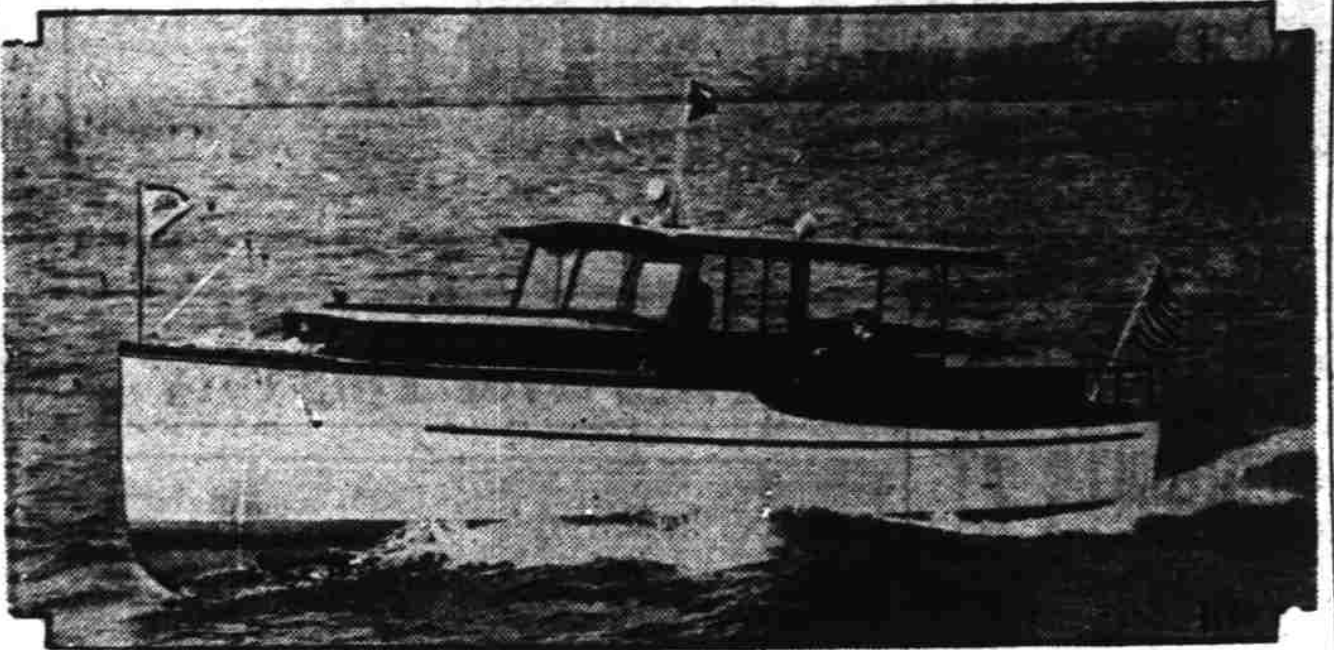

Practically no new material is in sight for filling up the classes next fall; the grade school classes will open with high enrollment and the junior high classes will be full to capacity, according to present figures.

More hand work and fewer books in the younger group seem advisable, and teaching along the activity method will be even more useful in this department than for normal children, Mr. Miller's report asserts.

LOCAL PENNEY MAN GOING TO OAKDALE

C. S. Eller Named Manager of New Store to be Opened in August

Announcement that he had been appointed to the management of a J. C. Penney store to be opened at Oakdale, Calif., late in August, was made here today by C. S. Eller, assistant manager of the Penney store in Salem. Mr. Eller will remove with his family to California late next month. Oakdale is in the San Joaquin valley, 16 miles from Modesto.

Mr. Eller has been with the J. C. Penney for two and one-half years. He first resided at Elko, Nevada working in the Penney store there before coming to Salem where he has been active in the store here for two and one-half years.

While reluctant to leave Salem because of the many friends made locally as well as the many attractions he has found in the city, Mr. Eller is optimistic about business prospects at Oakdale and is anxious to remove there to get his store started.

The Penney organization plan to open more than 500 stores this year under the J. C. Penney name.

HOME SUBJECT IS NOW RECOMMENDED

Recommendation that home administration be a required subject for senior girls of the high school is made by Mrs. Eula S. Cressch, supervisor of home economics in her annual report submitted to the city superintendent. This class, the report points out, "is in no sense of the word vocational but takes up home and family problems as a content subject requiring as much real head work as Latin."

It is pointed out that this course can be made a required subject, inasmuch as college entrance no longer stipulates as much mathematics, science or language as previously.

An outstanding piece of work in both senior and junior high home economics departments was the dietetic study carried on with the science and math departments cooperating in experimentation with guinea pigs on both adequate and inadequate feeding schedule.

Enrollment in the Parrish Junior high machine shops for the first semester numbered 113 in shop number one and 119 in shop number two, and slightly under this number in both shops for the second semester, according to the report handed in by E. S. Barker, director of manual training at Parrish.

Receipts of the two shops for the school year amounted to $285.02. Among the articles made were: goal posts, football line markers, paper roll shield, water carrier, book shelves, bulletin board, three-section book cases with drawers, table, flag staff, jumping standards, filing cabinets, jumping hurdles, folding screen and benches.

Also that fraternal, civic and patriotic organizations commemorate the adoption of our flag, and that all citizens give thought to the traditions and accomplishment which are symbolized by the flag of the United States."

WOMAN'S CORPSE IS DISCOVERED IN AUTO

SALINAS, Cal., June 11 — (AP)—A body encased in an expensive limousine, discovered today in an unused garage, was identified by police as Mrs. Lela Hays, who also used the name of Mabel Keith. The body was first thought by authorities to have been that of Mrs. Clara Moreau, 42, who mysteriously disappeared from her home three months ago.

Mrs. Hayes, police investigation determined, came to Salinas a year ago from Newman, Calif., accompanied by a man giving the name of Ray Kellogg. At that time, they said she owned the limousine, and had $10,000 in cash.

Kellogg was held by police for investigation. The body was found in the rear compartment of the car by a janitor, who was cleaning the garage. Windows had been closed, and a rubber tube connected with the exhaust pipe led to the rear seat. The body had been in the car three months, police said.

Police discovered a letter in Mrs. Hays' purse, which said she was going to commit suicide because of dependency over ill health. Kellogg, they said, would probably be released.

Asylum Inmates Effect Getaway

The Portland officers were notified. Camden Square, London, claims to have the longest continuous rainfall on record, the rain having fallen for 58 1/4 hours.

STOCK MARKET NOW STAGNANT

Trading On Wall Street Is Slowest In Many Weeks, Reports Show

NEW YORK, June 11 — (AP) — The stock market appeared to have fallen into a period of stagnation today comparable to those which followed the breaks of March, 1926, and June, 1928. Trading drifted along at the slowest pace experienced on the exchange since last August—the day's turnover exceeding 2,000,000 shares by a narrow margin—and prices fluctuated uncertainly as professional traders contested rather feebly for control.

A bear drive during the morning depressed a wide assortment of issues about 2 to 4 points, but shorts were driven to cover before the close of a brisk upturn in the utilities, which carried the Associated Press price index of 20 leading utility stocks up about two points to another record level. Call money held at 8 per cent, the figure reached yesterday, and bankers predicted that it would hold around that level for a few days. Time money, however, was a fraction higher at 2 1/2 per cent for maturities up to 90 days, reflecting the prospect of rather stringent money conditions the last half of the month.

The federal reserve condition statement of weekly reporting member banks showed a gain of $85,000,000 in loans on securities, a rather disappointing showing after the recent declines in broker's loans.
