ces tonight to vote against the Borah resolution.

Senator Edge, of New Jersey, a republican member of the finance committee, described the proposal as "revolutionary" in that it directed a standing committee of the senate what to do.

Referring to rejection of the King resolution in committee by the administration republicans on a strict party vote of 11 to 7, Senator Harrison of Mississippi, a minority member of the committee, asked Senator Watson if he thought the Borah proposal would be voted down with like precision.

I don't know anything about that," replied Watson, "but I intend to find out."

All wore overalls and blue shirts. The car was a 1927 model Buick.

They were aroused not only because of the attack on Kinne, a beloved citizen, but because Kilde, who had been shot twice and beaten, was kicked by the bandits after they tied him up.

The man hunt swept up the Nez Perce Indian reservation today, but tonight officers redoubled their efforts in Latah, Nez Perce and adjacent counties on the theory that the highwaymen doubled back into the wild country.

SPEIGHT SUED FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

tiff in the latter action suing as the administrator of the estate of Lawrence L. Walker, his two and one-half year old son who died in an auto accident in Speight's car near Gervais June 6.

The complaint against Speight in the civil action alleges that Speight had ordered Helen Adams, a young lady of 20 years, to drive the car at the reckless speed of 50 miles an hour although she was an incompetent driver. When the accident occurred, the auto was rounding a turn at the rate of nearly 60 miles an hour, the complaint alleges. Speight was unsuccessful in defending himself in court in the May term against a similar damage case, the jury giving a judgment of several thousand dollars against Speight.

Bond for Speight was furnished by a group of relatives and friends who made assurances satisfactory to District Attorney Carson and Brazier Small, justice of the peace, that the bond would be kept.

Speight's arrest followed the filing of a criminal information against him by the district attorney. The date for his preliminary hearing has not been set, pending Speight's employment of his legal counsel.

M'CULLY DISMISSED FROM WILLAMETTE

McCully had been notified in April, before "The Piper" was produced, that his services with the university would not be needed after the present year. He denied that Cully's connection with "The Piper," in which he had a leading role, had anything to do with the latter's dismissal. "McCully would have been relieved of his work if "The Piper" had been given on the moon," Dr. Doney is said to have stated.

While McCully was not in Salem Thursday afternoon, his wife was authority for the statement that her husband came here under an oral contract to work for a year for the university. This period did not end until September, she said. Mrs. McCully said her husband had been notified by a university representative in April that his work would terminate after this year but she declared that her husband's participation in "The Piper" was directly responsible for his dismissal, three months before the end of the period for which his services were contracted.

President Doney's objection to the presentation of "The Piper" was on the basis that it was given on Sunday in a church with admission being charged to the event.

Beaver, who took McCully's place, has been attending the Harvard school of medicine. Before going east he was university registrar.

Congress Gets to Work In Earnest on Hoover's Extra Session Business

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 13.—(AP)—A friendly house and hostile senate today went to work in earnest on President Hoover's extra session program, disposing of virtually everything but the tariff in the rush for a recess.

The president won and lost. The house overwhelmingly endorsed the administration farm bill in a 250 to 113 vote to demand its enactment by the senate without the export debenture relief plan, on which the senate has twice overridden Mr. Hoover.

The senate relented in its rebellious ways long enough to send to the White House the census reapportionment measure asked by the president, but then turned around and refused to consider the presidential recommendations for suspension of the national origins immigration quota basis.

The day also brought new troubles for the administration in the senate from Senator Borah of Idaho, who participated in the republican revolt on farm relief. He offered a resolution proposing to sidetrack the house tariff measure and have the senate tariff bill confined solely to revision of the agriculture schedules.

His proposal is in direct conflict with the program announced yesterday by Senator Watson of Indiana, the republican leader, for as general a revision of the tariff as was made by the house. Borah's move followed a futile attempt by the democrats on the finance committee earlier in the day to confine the committee's consideration strictly to revision of the farm rates.

The day's work left two of Mr. Hoover's four legislative recommendations disposed of—census and reapportionment approved and suspension of the national origins basis defeated. It also brought the farm relief bill to the edge of enactment.

Conferees of the senate and house expect to report the farm bill to both branches tomorrow, with the debenture plan not included. There is every indication that the senate now will approve the measure without much delay.

Leaders tonight were looking again to an early recess to await the preparation for the senate of the tariff bill by the finance committee. That recess will be proposed in the senate as soon as the farm bill is voted upon. It will be planned to begin either Saturday night or Tuesday and to last until mid-August.

There was no indication tonight as to what effect the Borah resolution on the tariff may have on the vacation plans. If it is adopted, the whole program may be up in the air.

The senate tonight made its unfinished business the proposal for revision of its rules to permit open sessions in the consideration of executive nominations.

FRENCH PLANE NOW WELL ON ITS WAY

passing over Matinicus Rock light 20 miles off the coast from Rockland, a little more than an hour after the takeoff, flying fast and about 1,200 feet high.

When the coast guard amphibian which started with the French plane last saw her she was at an altitude of 2,400 fet and speeding on at 115 miles an hour.

Before the takeoff Lotti announced that he would touch the tip of Cape Sables and then head for the "Coroner," the junction of the ship lanes approximately 1,000 miles east southeast of Old Orchard.

From there he had two courses in mind. The southern would take him over the Azores and make the flight cover 4,300 miles, the northern would take them to longitude 47, latitude 29, and thence east to St. Nazarie and Paris, a total distance only 3,700 miles. Conditions when he reached the "Coroner", were to determine the course.

Average Speed To Be 100 Miles Per Hour

If the plane maintained an average speed of 100 miles an hour, which was considered probable, it should have been far beyond Cape Sable at 6 o'clock tonight.

The Yellow Bird also should have made its way through the "thick" weather which covered the ocean for about 200 miles off the coast.

Dr. James H. Kimball, New York weather man, said they would have "as near perfect" weather as would ever be found over the North Atlantic.

Lotti, wha also acted as radio man, said he would not send any messages until the ship had traveled at least 1,000 miles.

To Jean Assolant fell the responsibility and the honor of taking the heavily laden craft into the air, with his bride of three days nervously watching the huge all yellow ship gather momentum as it traveled down the beach. He took it aloft with a run of less than a mile and a half, gained a few hundred feet of altitude and swung it about to the east.

Prison Terms Are Confessed By Slayer

The prisoner admitted on the witness stand that he served terms in Folsom Prison, California, and Auburn, N. Y., for embezzlement.

The advertisement that resulted in his meeting with Mrs. Mowry stated he was a physician and not adverse to meeting a woman with money. His confession told of bringing the woman to Baltimore in an effort to raise $1,000 to repay her the savings she had entrusted to him. He married her in Elkton, Md., and drove north in his automobile when she insisted that he make a home for her. Salem Girl Gets Break In Effort To Carve Out Career On Eastern Stage

The famous Horatio Alger stories might well be applied to the case of Miss Joan Evans, recent graduate of the Salem senior high school, and very prominent in Salem's social activities.

Joan, who is still in her very early "teens" was always desirous of getting a "break" to go on the stage. Her wishes and desires were always of the most enthused variety. She tried in vain—interviewed local theater people, as well as going to Portland and other cities, in an effort to get an opportunity to sing on the stage.

Recently, she happened to stroll into the Elsinore theatre, while L. Carlos Meier, organist, who recently arrived in the city from Chicago, was practicing his organ selections for the current bill.

An idea immediately struck her, and she asked Meier to give her an opportunity to try-out. Meier at first seemed a bit skeptical, inasmuch as he did not know anything about the girl's voice or ability, but decided to give her a trial at the matinee performance.

The matinee came—and pretty Joan was preparing herself for the stage debut. Her mother, sat anxiously in an aisle seat, awaiting her daughter's appearance.

The organ started the number that Joan was to sing, and she picked up the number and sang the musical selection in a la Sophie Tucker mannerism. A thunderous applause greeted her on the completion of this song—one might even add that she was accorded an ovation.

Fortunately, at the time, there were present a few representatives of a large theatre circuit, and these individuals became intensely interested in her work.

George B. Guthrie, owner and manager of the Elsinore, has assured Joan that he will do everything posible to help her.

Someday we may hear that Salem's pretty high school lass has made good on Broadway.
