

Tariff on Sugar Comes in For Hot Debate As Senate Committee Hears Testimony

WASHINGTON, June 26. (AP)—The keen controversy over the tariff rate on sugar which has agitated producers and consumers for many weeks was taken before the senate finance subcommittee today with a group of witnesses demanding upward revision of the duties.

Although four subcommittees listened to testimony on various sections of the tariff bill passed by the house, the subcommittee considering the sugar question occupied the focal point of interest in a room crowded with spectators and witnesses. The result of the day's activities found on the committee desks a sheaf of requests for increased duties on sugar, wool, hides, iron and steel and a host of miscellaneous commodities.

Severely Exam Given

At the hearing on the sugar tariff, the witnesses were given a severe cross examination and the senators showed clearly that they regarded this levy as one demanding more attention perhaps than any other in the bill. Heading the group of witnesses was William M. Jardine, former secretary of agriculture under Calvin Coolidge.

Jardine, who said he was interested in helping the beet sugar grower, declared the house rate would permit an expansion in the growing of sugar beets, which he described as a non-surplus and good "rotation" crop, now produced by 100,000 farms in 17 states.

Any duty that would bring six cent sugar, he said, would permit western beet sugar factories to pay $8 to $8.50 a ton to the growers of sugar beets and the farmer thus would be benefited.

Fly Eradication Progresses

Great progress already has been made, he continued, to eradicate a fly which attacks the sugar beets and a plant disease that was prevalent in the cane producing state of Louisiana. With increasing federal appropriations for this eradication, he added, more encouragement would be lent to increased growth of both cane and beet sugar.

Democratic members of the committee declared the production of sugar in this country had not increased since the high duties placed in effect in 1922. Jardine said the government, which was responsible for farmers, especially on reclamation projects, going into sugar beet raising, could and should do more than help the industry.

CROWD EXPECTED TO SEE ALBANY RACES

Champion Driver Here Last Summer on List of Many Entrants

Four "red hot" auto races will mark the program of the July 4 meet at Albany when 25 drivers from all parts of the northwest will vie for prizes aggregating $2000 on the track at the Linn county fairgrounds.

The races are being sponsored by the same organization which put on the successful races here last July 4 when 11,000 people crowded the grandstands at the state fair to see Earl Beggs win the 50-mile free-for-all. The races are being held at Albany due to the fact that construction is under way at the fairgrounds and makes impossible the use of the track there.

The Albany track is being graded and oiled preparatory to the races and will furnish an ideal place for the drive, according to race officials.

Star Driver Booked

Included in the entries at Albany will be Guy Durbini, dirt track champion of the northwest; Earl Beggs, free-for-all winner at Salem last year; Ray Uyehara, the only Japanese auto race driver in the United States and a score of other drivers all of whom have had experience in racing in the northwest.

At least 6000 people are expected to attend the Albany events. The grandstand there provides for 3500 ticket holders while 2500 more can be accommodated in bleachers erected especially for the races.

Four events are scheduled for the Albany meet. They will be a ten mile race for Class A cars; a ten mile race for Class B cars; a ten mile consolation race for losers in the first two events and a 250 mile free-for-all event.

grounds were started, there have been no deaths from drowning here, while previously there were from two to four drownings each summer. As to the other benefits, the pictures told the story.

CHLORATE RECEIVED

Umatilla county court has received 40,000 pounds of calcium chlorate to be used in the eradication of the morning glory pest. Farmers have purchased the entire lot and a lively campaign is prospect.

MANY CONVICTS "OUT" 316 Find Work Takes Them Out of Walls HIGH MARK IS REACHED

More than 40 per cent of the convicts who are technically "incarcerated" in the Oregon state penitentiary, are actually outside a large share of each day. The prison population this week reached a new high total of 756, and of this number of men and women, 316 were working outside the walls.

This surprising situation affords new insight into the extent of prison activities, and also into the complexity of the system whereby the prison administration keeps escapes at a minimum.

Many at Farm Tasks

Of the 107 trussies, the greater part are employed in a variety of farm tasks and in the flax work outside the walls, while a few are truck drivers, others work on the lawn, and others take care of officials' and guards' quarters.

Sixteen squads of prisoners work under the direction of guards outside the prison. The list of these squads furnished to Superintendent Henry Meyers each day reveals the diversity of work that is being done.

One squad is assigned to the engineering department, another to cow barn construction. Others include garage construction, administration building construction, picking berries, hoeing beans, weeding and planting at Lake Labish, flax tanks, flax sheds, and six squads at work in the flax

Evidence that their work in fostering the playground movement in Salem was well worth while, was afforded the members of the Salem Rotary club Wednesday when Dr. David B. Hill showed two reels of motion pictures, largely devoted to depicting the playground program.

It was explained by R. R. Boardman, Y. M. C., physical director, that Dr. Hill has been showing these pictures in other cities to spread the gospel of playground benefits.

The program pays for itself simply in keeping the children off the streets, Boardman said, mentioning also that since the play-
