OREGON'S HOP CROP IS LARGE

Last Year's Record Output Will be Exceeded This Season, Claim

Prospects for a splendid hop crop throughout the state were foreseen Monday by Durbin & Cornoyer, well known local growers and buyers, when they made an estimate that the yield of the state would run between 90,000 and 100,000 bales, while the 1928 yield, considered very good, went to 88,000 bales.

While quantity appears good, quality is also high in these growers' opinion. Also the present time some yards are fighting lice and a growth known as honey dew and it is imperative that these pests be checked since the foreign trade is rigid in its requirements that hops be clean. This year England's duty on hops imported amounts to 18c a pound and letters for foreign purchasers of hops demand that the grade secured from this country be high.

The hop crop is to be large in England this year, according to advices received from that country although some trouble is experienced there with lice. While American grown hops must face a duty of 18c a pound, plus a freight charge of 3.15c a pound and insurance in transit, there will be considerable demand for local hops due to the fact that these are blended by English brewers with their own and German grown hops to produce the desired flavors.

Faced by large production here and abroad, the outlook for a favorable price in the Willamette valley is not encouraging. No sales of the 1929 yield have as yet been reported by the cleanup of the 1928 crop indicates that the price for this year will run around 15c a pound which is below a price which will make any net profit for the grower.

Some sales of the 1928 crop left in Oregon have been made in the last fortnight until Monday the county showed that only 4881 bales of that year were left unsold in the state. This is a slightly larger carry-over than in 1928 and a much larger surplus than that carried over in 1927.

Sales were made in the last fortnight as follows: A. J. Ray & Sons, 206 bales at 15c; J. Harry Hart 18 bales at 14c; Arthur S. H. 158 bales at 15c; James Linn, 22 bales at 14c; 56 bales at 13c; 27 bales at 13c; T. A. Livesley, 45 bales of fuggles at 13c.

Check Being Made ON ESTATES FILED

Check was being made Monday in the county clerk's office of all estates filed during the months of April, May and June pending the required report every three months to the state treasurer for purposes of inheritance tax collection.

Sixty estates were admitted to probate in the last three months state inheritance tax is required only when the estate is of a value exceeding $10,000 provided that the bequest is made to a relative. In cases of bequest to non-relatives or under a collateral bequest, the inheritance tax starts at the $1000 mark in collateral legacies and on all moneys left to non-relatives.

Mrs. G. Ed Ross of Salem Enjoying Eastern Journey

Mrs. G. Ed Ross, who is spending a month or so in the east attending the national Baptist convention at Denver the latter part of June as a delegate from the Calvary Baptist church, has written Salem friends of her trip as far as Detroit, Mich., and is apparently enjoying a delightful trip. Following are excerpts from her letter:

"The stop at Boise was most pleasant. What impressed me most there was the beautiful city park along the river, which covers what was the city dump—being five blocks in length, with tennis courts, swimming pool, picnic grounds, zoo, and other attractions, where tired folk may go for rest and amusement. Also it is a good object lesson—making the best of a bad situation."

"The three days in Denver were delightful beyond words. The 'mile high' city personified its reputation for cordiality, and delegates were treated royally. The convention program was splendid, and very inspirational. Among the many special features was a delegation of Crow Indians from Lodge Grass, Montana, who, in their gay shawls and moccasins, and the men with long braids—all singing a hymn in their native language—were an impressive spectacle."

"There also was a wonderful historic pageant depicting the work of Adamirum Judson and his good wife, Ann. The lighting effects in this were amazingly beautiful."

"An exceedingly interesting side attraction was booths with curios from the Baptist mission fields, throughout the world. Then, there were the usual convention branch postoffice, telegraph office, bureau of information and publicity department. The hospitalities from every thinkable source were unbounded."

"One Pennsylvania delegate said to me, 'This delightful informality of the West is indeed wonderful—where people speak without formal introductions.'"

"A few busy days were spent in Chicago with relatives, and many worth-while places visited. From here we motored to South Haven, Michigan, where I was met by my brother, and family of Detroit, and we motored on here—a trip delightful beyond words to express."

BEAN'S PLACE TO BE FILLED

Governor Expected to Name Successor to Commissioner Shortly

Appointment of a successor to Louis E. Bean as a member of the public service commission, awaits the decision of Governor Patterson.

The question was raised here Monday as to whether Governor Patterson has authority to appoint a successor to Mr. Bean, who would serve later than the general election in 1930. This question was based on the 1929 legislative act which makes the offices of public service commissioners appointive, but provides that elective members of the commission shall serve out the term for which they were elected. Mr. Bean was elected to serve the term ending December 31, 1930.

Attorneys expressed the opinion that the governor's appointee to succeed Mr. Bean, would serve until January 1, 1931, when re-appointment of the official would be made under the 1929 law. It was pointed out that even though a candidate for office vacated by Mr. Bean's death was nominated and elected at the 1930 elections, he would be prevented from holding the office for the reason that the appointment under the 1929 act would become effective on January 1, 1931.

Reports indicated that Governor Patterson would be urged to
