

Local News Briefs

Guests at Rotary—F. C. Wasmann of Portland, Bert Maling of Hillsboro, and Al Pierce and Horace Walters of Corvallis, were guests at the Salem Rotary club luncheon Wednesday. Mr. Walters invited the local club members to attend the executive assembly for Rotary presidents and secretaries at Corvallis, July 22, and 23. All Rotarians are invited to attend, and although the conference does not open until Monday, the 22nd, there will be a golf tournament and a union church service the Sunday preceding. A banquet Monday night, followed by a water carnival, will be the high lights in the way of entertainment. Seven members of the local club signified their intention of attending.

Asks Divorce—Suit for divorce was commenced in circuit court Wednesday by Jattie Hastings against George W. Hastings, her husband, whom she married April 11, 1919. For years he has been unfaithful to her, the plaintiff alleges. She maintains that Hastings struck her and added to this physical abuse the mental abuse of calling her vile names. She asks the custody of two children, one five years of age and one nine.

County Court Deserted—The offices of the county judge and clerk deserted Wednesday but through non-vacation or fishing excursions undertaken by any of the members. Rather the occasion was an extensive inspection of some of the road construction in progress in the county. Judge Sigmond and Commissioners Porter and Smith going over the roads together.

Visit from Corvallis—Friends of Al Pierce and H. E. Walter, both of Corvallis, were glad to greet them on a short visit to Salem Wednesday. STOCKWELL IS SPEAKER HERE

Conditions in Vienna, Austria Related by Physician Upon Return

Excellent furnished apartments at $1.70 a month. U. S. money, constitute a strong appeal for Salemites to move to Vienna, Austria; but those apartments are for laborers only, and the prevailing wages of 11 a week, with living costs other than rent not much lower than in this country, dim the ideal picture somewhat.

These were some of the conditions pictured by Dr. H. K. Stockwell in a talk at the Rotary club luncheon Wednesday, in which he described Vienna as he saw it while engaged in medical study there recently.

Following the war, socialists of a suppurative "red" hue came into power, but their regime has been successful because in addition to being radicals, they are the most intelligent and benevolent citizens of the country, Dr. Stockwell said.

This government adopted a confiscatory policy with respect to real estate, principally because of the terrible housing conditions that preceded. The municipality, which also a state, has built 30,000 new attractive apartments. The $1.70 a month which tenants pay, entitles them to the use of baths, laundry, nursery, and free "movies" every night in the building.

Vienna was bankrupt after the war, and suffering from cold and hunger is still noticeable. Dr. Stockwell said. The government is working on the problem of central heating.

Vienna has an amazing water system, with a pipe line 159 miles in length. Water is furnished free of charge by the city.

Because of lack of time to complete his description, Dr. Stockwell was asked to continue it at the next meeting.

PATTON STILL OUT FOR CONSUL-POST

Hal Patton, Salem alderman and for many years a leader in Republican circles both in Marion county and in the state, is still a candidate for an appointment to a post with the United States foreign service, he announced Wednesday after a conference with Senator Charles McNary who pointed out to Mr. Patton some of the difficulties confronting the candidate for such appointment under new legislation and customs effecting the service.

Consuls now must be able to speak the language of the nation to which they are sent, Mr. Patton says, and in addition it is well nigh impossible to secure an appointment where a man is now serving who is proving satisfactory in his work.

Patton expects to discuss the matter again with Mr. McNary later in the month and to talk over the situation with Senator Fred Steigler when the latter comes to Salem August 10. For some years Mr. Patton's father was a consul in Japan and it has been Hal's desire for years to round out his political life by some service for the United States in a foreign country.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS WITH FINE PROGRAM

Chautauqua opened last night on the Willamette University field with a typical Chautauqua program and the first introductions all around. The Jay Tobias company "baker," as they called it, a whole entertainment meal before an appreciative audience with Jay Tobias, the comic himself, as the chef and general mixer of spice (jazz for the flapper) meat (classical music) and pie (old favorites) which was served in seven courses.

It is hardly conceivable that five people could possess the numerous accomplishments the Jay Tobias company displayed Wednesday night. Saxophone, cello, accordion, violins, banjos, ukuleles and even castanets found their way into the seven courses which included gypsy and old-fashioned songs and dances with lighting effects. And through it all Jay Tobias chuckled and squeaked with his side-splitting impersonations.

Obstructionists In Error As Witticisms Prove All Wrong; Dryers Too Few

Several weeks ago, there was printed in The Statesman a statement to the effect that a high authority in the industry here had predicted, from then present indications, an 80,000,000 pound prune crop when dried in this section, including the Willamette valley, southern Oregon and Clark county, Washington. Also the statement was made from the same authority that perfect conditions from that time on until harvest might bring a 100,000,000 pound prune crop for drying for the coming harvest.

The fact that this district lacks drying space to turn out more than 80,000,000 pounds of dried prunes, under normal conditions, meaning immunity from continuous and heavy rains during picking time, was also printed. In conclusion, the fact that a more than 80,000,000 pound crop for drying would mean the loss of all above 80,000,000 pounds, unless more drying facilities were provided, was stated.

This statement, on high authority, provoked a loud "haha" from several sources, including an interview from a local authority who is generally over conservative; which he has a right to be, of course. He is often right.

It seems that a man who has been buying or contracting for green prunes has to stop making offers, because he has engaged all the drying space he can find available, and has enough only for the prunes he has already engaged.

A part of the item under the heading says: "This is a situation which hasn't happened for some time and with the good price now existing on prunes it is more than likely more driers will be rushed in if something doesn't happen to the crop between now and harvest time."

All of which shows that the Statesman's informant knew what he was talking about. A lot of prunes will be canned. Every canning plant will work on prunes to its capacity. But the season for canning prunes is short. And all the plants together could not make much more of a dent than they have made each year on the crop; and could not go far in taking care of enough prunes to supply 80,000,000 or 100,000,000 pounds of the dried product; for that is only a third to a fifth of the green crop needed for such a tonnage.

Prunes ready to dry will stand some rain, in fact a lot of it, if there are plenty of pickers and ample drying space, and passable roads and facilities for getting them from the orchards in wet weather.

It is to be hoped that no prunes may go to waste this fall; but the best insurance against his possibility would be the provision of a much new drying space; and this costs money and takes time.

A Statesman news item of Thursday announced that Young & Wells had decided to have no black cherry deal in Salem this year. They changed their minds again and announced that they will handle cherries for fresh shipment, as usual, at their place at the Salem end of the Willamette river bridge.

Royal Ann cherries were coming fast at all the canneries handling them in Salem Wednesday. All other fruit supplies were in good volume, with Marshall strawberries, however, shading off fast. The peak canning season will last for three weeks, when there will be a lull, or perhaps a hiatus in some cases, waiting for evergreen blackberries; then Bartlett pears, then prunes, then apples.

GANG WARS, FEUDS TOLD IN NEW STORY

From the gang wars of New York's toughest district to a hot family feud in Virginia! Eddie Regan thought he was leaving trouble and strife behind him when he sneaked away from his gunmen pals—quit the Big City cold, and landed in the apparently peaceful confines of the charming southern state.

But here he found more trouble. Plenty of it. And romance, too! You'll find a thrill in every chapter—yes, in every line of Robert Terry Shannon's popular best selling serial, "Blue Blood and Red," which details the adventures of young Regan in a most graphic and interesting manner.

"Blue Blood and Red" plunges Regan into a romance with pretty Marian Thorndike, daughter of a wealthy southern family. And Regan's friends and protector happens to be at odds with the Thorndikes! But you'll have to read the story yourself to really get a "kick" out of it. The first installment will appear in The Statesman on Sunday, July 14.

COUNTY TO PAY OFF $85,000 IN BONDS

Monday Marion county will pay her debts. That is she will offer bond holders of the $85,000 county road bonds $85,000 in cash for that amount of bonds scheduled to be retired in 1929. And while the county treasury has disbursed this sum, with interest, one half of the county road bond issue will have been paid in full and only $425,000 will be outstanding.

The bonds were authorized in 1919 but all were not issued until 1924, the bonds being secured by a construction work progressed. These bonds bear five and one-half per cent interest. The county exchequer was in good shape Wednesday and readily able to accommodate the bond retirement demands. In the general fund was $502,664 and in the several road funds was $684,914.

Marion county operates entirely on a cash basis in contrast to a number of counties in the state where there is considerable warrant indebtedness necessitating the payment of considerable interest by the county.

PAPER MAKERS ARE REVAMPED; WIN 5-4

A thoroughly revamped Oregon Pulp & Paper company baseball team held the State House, Tuesday to a tight extra inning game Wednesday night at Olinger field, the politicians winning 5 to 4. Fitch fielding out of runs that would have loomed large, for both teams.

The Papermakers scored twice in the first inning, having the bases loaded at one time. They got two more in the second. The State House team also scored two in the first, adding one in the second, one in the third and getting the deciding run after Hickenbaugh, Papermakers' pitcher, had struck out two men in the sixth.
