

SALEM BOYS AT CAMP HULBERT

Great Time Being Had by Contingent; High is Ball Patcher

CAMP HULBERT, VANCOUVER BARRACKS, Washington, July 12.—(Special)—Living the life of one of Uncle Sam's soldiers seems to make a big hit with student trainees at Camp Hulbert. The days are crammed full both of enjoyment and experience...

After the morning exercises they are drilled in different formations until 11:30 o'clock. Mess breakfast is at 6:30 and is followed by an assembly for drill. The companies march out of the drill field in step with the 7th infantry band...

Wallace Hug, son of George Hug, superintendent of Salem schools, is holding down the mound for company D, which claims to be a good candidate for winning the year's championship...

Among the trophies to arrive in camp are prizes for competition with a hickory stick and a baseball which heaved 600 throats to roar in delight when they saw the autograph of America's greatest swat king, Babe Ruth.

Besides the three inter-company leagues, which are baseball, volley ball and playground ball, there are individual sports to which each company may send candidates.

Wayne Dunham, a Salem lad, is a very likely candidate for some prize in the boxing events. Frank Cross, runner up last year, expects to better his last years showing this year.

There are four Salem youths who are experiencing their second year at camp. Corporal Milton Taylor, Hank Cross, Edgar Reitz and Wallace Hug.

Salem boys enrolled in the basic course are: Wayne Dunham, William Galtsdorf, Frances and Bud Hoffnell.

The trainers are at liberty to leave camp in the evenings but must be in bed by 10 o'clock.

The students were entertained Saturday night at the recreation area with a program arranged by Chaplain Husset of the Seventh Infantry.

Sunday morning found every student attending church which was under the direction of Chaplain Beard. A short talk was inspired the heart of every boy in camp.

EXEMPTION OF $200 SET BY COMMISSION

An exemption of $200, as provided in the intangibles tax bill which passed both houses of the 1929 legislature and later was signed by Governor Patterson, will guide the new state tax commission in the compilation of returns under the compilation of returns announced here Friday.

This was announced here Friday after the commission had reviewed carefully the record and progress of the intangibles tax bill through the legislature, and had conferred with the attorney general.

The investigation of the commission was inspired by reports that certain persons had threatened to sue the commission to determine whether the exemption in the intangible tax law was $500 or $200. The commission found that the house passed an intangibles tax bill providing for an exemption of $500, and that a similar bill later was approved by the senate. Neither of these bills were concurred in by the opposite branch of the legislature and died before reaching the governor for signature.

"We are definitely of the opinion," read a statement issued by the state tax commission today, "that the law and the facts substantiate the exemption of $200. Notwithstanding the previous attempt of the legislature to increase the exemption to $500, the record clearly indicates the bill contained the $200 exemption when it reached the conference committee and it was repassed by the house and senate and signed by the governor in that form."

"The measure was so enacted and the state tax commission is compelled to recognize the $200 exemption as it appears in the printed law."

WOODMEN'S CHIEF RESIGNS POSITION

SEATTLE, July 12.—(AP)—Moved by recent suits entered against the lodge in Nebraska and criticisms directed against the administration by the courts, Sovereign Commander W. A. Fraser, Omaha, today resigned from his office in the Woodmen of the World and the Pacific Woodmen Life association.

The act precipitated a demonstration that ended in all other officers of the order following suit and brought about the unanimous election of the entire group to a one year term as an expression of confidence.

The resignations climaxed a dramatic moment at the end of Fraser's annual report and the convention was thrown into an uproar.

After brilliant speeches of confidence by Congressman W. V. Gregory of Kentucky, C. F. Keller of Missouri, D. E. Henderson, of North Carolina, Farror Newberry of Arkansas, D. H. Kinchloe of Kentucky and Judge H. B. Porter of Texas, the vote was taken, and all resigned officers were returned to their official capacities.

CLEVELAND, July 12.—(AP)—Threatened with wholesale arrests of employees and confiscation of property, operators of Thistle-down track temporarily gave up their first attempt in three years to hold a running race meet today in the face of Sheriff E. J. Hanratty's determination to suppress betting.

As the sheriff marshalled a force of 75 regulars and special deputy sheriffs, armed them with tear gas bombs and sawed off shotguns and instructed them to destroy property if necessary to stop wagering this afternoon, the one-day meet was suspended until three men arrested as the result of the use of the "contribution" system of betting are given hearings on charges of gambling.

ANTI-CIGARETTE CAMPAIGN STARTS

Salem got its first official taste of the anti-cigarette campaign being waged in Oregon by the Anti-Cigarette league which was started recently at Eugene this week with the filing of petitions signed in Salem, urging that the initiative measure advocated by the league be placed on the ballot next year.

County Clerk Boyer is charged with the job of seeing that each signature counted on the petition is valid and that the signator is a legal registered voter of the county. When the check of the first petition had been completed 87 names were found to be bona fide but a number of additional signatures were declared invalid due to the fact that the people who made the signatures were not registered voters.

The anti-cigarette initiative measure is sponsored by the league which bears that title but the proponent of the petitions locally is E. F. Ackley, who is now in Salem securing signatures.

Under the requirements of the secretary of state nearly 16,000 signatures will be required before

CHAUTAUQUA FOUND ATTRACTIVE EVENT

The throbbing music of plaintive voices and strumming banjos from the southern plantations never fail to touch the popular chord in any community, especially if the presentation is of the quality of the Jackson Jubilee Singers who appeared at the afternoon and evening performances of the Chautauqua Thursday.

Chester M. Sanford, the vocational expert, speaking in the evening and the high school students, who were special guests of the management, spoke of the vast fields of opportunity open to those who will fit themselves for them. During his lecture, which was well popularized with numerous witticisms, he made such challenging statements as "aimlessness is the curse of modern education," "vocational guidance is a civic duty," "a dad can tell you what Babe Ruth's salary is, but he can't tell you the salaries of the teachers who are instructing his children, and you can't expect a high school teacher to have a great deal of data concerning vocations, anyway."

Professor Sanford proposed that a service club of the city arrange a sort of clubroom where high school students might meet and talk with men of the community, who have become outstanding in the vocation in which the students were interested.

Following the lecture, Professor Sanford met the high school students and the parents who had specific questions to ask him and he answered them personally.
