SUN'S VALUE IS DESCRIBED

Detroit Health Department Makes Careful Survey of Situation

Importance of sunlight as a disinfectant has long been realized, but it remained for the Detroit department of health to make an exact investigation as to how much power the sun's rays possess to destroy. Some results of the eastern department's study are set forth in the recent bulletin of the Oregon state board of health, as follows:

An experiment is presented which shows that in the middle of the day, sunlight will kill staphylococcus aureus in one hour. Another experiment is presented which shows sunlight under the conditions above mentioned, and after passing through plate glass 5mm. thick will kill staphylococcus aureus in four and one-half hours.

An experiment is given which shows that when an iron arc of a certain size is used as a source of light, if this light is passed through a spectroscopic and the spectrum is spread on the surface of a bacterial culture, bactericidal effect will be noted in that part of the spectrum which is composed of wave lengths between 2300 and 2850 Angstrom units. On longer exposure, longer wave lengths are noted to be effective. It would appear that the effective rays in the sunlight must be confined to those wave lengths which are apparent at noon but not apparent in early morning and in late afternoon.

Sunlight and window light can be relied upon to destroy bacteria when exposed to it for two hours during the middle of the day. Washing the woodwork or parts of furniture likely to have become contaminated will break up covering matter which conceals bacteria; this will make the sunlight more effective.

Open books, feathers, draperies, rugs, or cushions, may be amply disinfected by placing them out in direct sunlight for two to four hours during the middle of the day. They must be so placed that the sun can have free access to their surfaces.

It is important that buildings should not be erected that are not adequately lighted by sunlight. A smoke screen will deprive a community of the solar rays which destroy bacteria. A smoke screen will also deprive a community of these solar rays which stimulate nutrition in young childhood. With modern methods of handling fuel it is now possible to reduce the smoke nuisance to a minimum.

The ringer made several attempts to carry him up a steep slope but failed. He made the victim as comfortable as possible but the man later was found dead.

Later Browne, as head of a rescue party organized to search for the sixth member's body, refused to allow others to make the perilous descent into the crevasse. He was lowered to the ledge below by a rope, and after chopping ice from the body of the man attached a rope to it and it was raised to the top.

At a high altitude, a party of six returning from the high peak in unfavorable weather, fell into the crevasse. Two were killed and four of the party injured. One succeeded in reaching Camp Mer where Ranger Browne was on duty. Without equipment for ice work he went to the scene, saved the life of one man by assisting him to a point where he could proceed to Camp Muir alone, then in the face of a blizzard returned to search for two missing members of the party.

After two hours of dangerous ice work he found one of them dying.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 24.—(AP)—In a court room crowded with women spectators, Dr. James H. Snook, once a member of the Ohio State University faculty, was on trial today, charged with the first degree murder of his co-ed paramour, Miss Theora Hix. Questioning of tentative jurors was along routine lines, with the prosecution asking them if they had any scruples against inflicting death in the electric chair upon the former professor should he be found guilty.

Dr. Snook's wife sat quietly at his side. She has affirmed her faith in her husband, who is alleged to have beaten Miss Hix over the head with a hammer, slashed her throat and dumped her body on a lonely rifle range June 9. Seven tentative jurors were chosen.

Note From Y. M. C. A. Camp Indicates Boys There Are Enjoying Summer Outing

All the joys of a "Y" camp chief of which appear to be the daily privilege of eating "three squares" are vividly depicted in special letters written to The Statesman by Kenneth McCormick who is one of the local young men. The log of a day at the Elk lake camp as furnished by McCormick who are leaders for the camp.

Tuesday 50 of the loudest, and loudest of Salem's future citizens bumped six hours on an army truck to Humburg, Oregon, six miles east of Detroit; hiked four miles over a mountain trail to Elk lake—dropped as it is in the cavern between Battle Ax mountain and the Estacada range—and ate for at least an hour straight from the cooking of Super-Chef Burt Cray, Ike White, Dwight Adams, and Earl Douglas, who came in last Saturday, set up seven sleeping tents, and what is far more important to the fellows, one cook and dining tent. The luggage came in on five pack horses, one of whom tried to jump off the trail at about 1000 feet elevation above the canyon below for no other reason than that some bird suddenly flew out of the brush. Fellows like Melvin Engel, Jimmy Sehan, and Win Needham feared for the safety of their tooth brushes after that experience.

Theoretically everyone gets ready for swimming in five minutes. In as much as it was a cold morning and a quarter of a mile to the swimming place, Wednesday the boys cut the time down three or four minutes. Dwight Adams, veteran camper, drew first blood by falling in, clothes and all. There were a few other casualties in the first swim except to Louis Bean, Jr., and Emory Hubbs who found that soap that doesn't float is no good for ablutions in a lake. Ivory gets the indorsement here for no other reason than that it stays on top. The cleansing qualities don't matter.

Each tent represents a squad and is responsible for some particular work about camp. Dish washing isn't exactly the sort of thing that appeals to Howard Dann Jr., and Ralph Eyre, but they all do it—and like it! Bud Mercer, Allen Robbins and Luman Ney have the privilege of helping Burt Cray in the kitchen. Although the three in had much more experience, they hope to get their cook papers soon. A lot of Salem mothers will be surprised at the sort of assembled meal their sons will be able to construct on return from this, the ninth annual Y camp.

Everybody is happy, most everybody working almost all swimming and hiking, and in one thing at least, concerning their effort—eating.

G. N. DOESN'T WANT YREKA ROAD, CLAIM

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—(AP)—L. C. Gilman, of Seattle, executive vice-president of the Great Northern Railway company, today issued a formal denial that the Great Northern is negotiating for the purchase of the Yreka Railway company, which operates an eight-mile line from Montague to Yreka in Siskiyou county.

The statement followed widespread rumors that the California line was about to be taken over by the Great Northern, and substantiated previous denials by officials of the latter company.

Claims totaling $1149.45 have been paid to Statesman readers by the North American Accident Insurance Co. in less than one year. These claims were paid on the $100 policy issued to Statesman readers.

FASHIONS TOLD ABOUT HOMES

Interior Decorator Describes Present Trend of Architecture

"Yes, fashions in interior decorating change, but the essentials remain the same," says Elgin E. Gregory, interior decorator recently "imported" by the C. S. Hamilton Furniture company. "Furniture is less massive; glass-paned chairs is popular; the mode tends toward simplicity, but beauty and harmony are the ultimate goals.

"The harmony which is achieved in really well-decorated homes is not only between furnishings, walls, rugs, and hangings, but between the occupants and their surroundings as well. In other words, homes express the personalities that dwell therein.

"People may scoff at the idea of employing an interior decorator but they fail to take into consideration the fact that they are constantly paying designers and tailors to dress them becomingly, and doctors to make them healthy—why should they ruin the results of these good works by living in disorder which not only detracts from their own attractiveness but actually spoils their dispositions and digestions.

"Interior decorating influences national and international problems from Farm Relief to the 'Flaming Youth' question. For after all, the important things in life are centered about the home and where there is beauty (even though simple and inexpensive) there is contentment and happiness.

It is easy to understand that Mr. Gregory is enthusiastic about his profession in which, though young, he has had a great deal of practical experience. He comes to Salem from Portland, where he was employed by Babcock and Peets. "It is my ideal," says he "to really influence the homes which Hamilton's furnish; wall finishing and prop- erty lighting are as important as davenport and chairs, and because of this we are glad to offer this little additional service to aid in the complete interior decoration of the home."
